DRY SPIES TIPPED TO RUM MEN

Today

Happy Day, and Fireworks
A Bull's Ear for Chaplin
Rockefellers Do Things "Big"
Nature Is Annoyed

By Arthur Brisbane

ALMOST IN TIME for his 57th birthday anniversary, five great nations, Germany, France, Italy, Japan and Great Britain, yesterday signed a document endorsing the President's "debt holiday" proposal. The announcement made the world more cheerful. Foreign bonds went up, good news for Americans that bought them. Wall Street, rapidly wiping a tear from each eye, straightened out its wrinkles, and bid "Big Steel" to 90, other prices to match.

There is nothing like action, and the President "got action" when he announced his moratorium idea.

Debts are not forgiven, or wiped out. The plan is to give Germany an opportunity to get her breath.

Nature, without knowing it, but most appropriately, arranges a cosmic fireworks display in honor of the good financial news tonight. Look for a magnificent display of meteors, if clouds don't interfere. The display comes once a year and should be especially brilliant this year. Look at the sky in the direction of the Perseids and see how many you can count of the million bright meteors visible from different parts of the country.

The Perseids are all that is left of Tuttle's comet, smashed up long ago, floating in space around the sun, held by its gravitation, and bombarding planets that come close enough. These meteors rarely do harm.

In Spain, Charles Chaplin, whom you have seen walking with his toes out, saw eight bulls killed in one fight, but didn't say what he thought about it. Those that know him know what he thought.

Lalanda, Spain's champion bull fighter, conferred great honor on Mr. Chaplin by presenting to him an ear cut from one of the dead bulls.

If bulls ruled the world, you might imagine them forcing Charlie Chaplin and Lalanda into "a man ring" to fight at a terrific disadvantage. You couldn't imagine the worst bull cutting off Charlie Chaplin's ear and handing it to some of the moving picture bulls among the spectators.

The Rockefellers do things in a big way, investing money, or when distributing it, for science and education.

Detailed plans of the new "Rockefeller City," in the heart of New York, filed yesterday, include parks on the roofs of three full city blocks, a total investment of about $250,000,000, one building among many others containing the largest theater in the world.

The right name for Mr. Rockefeller's magnificent improvement, wiping out old-fashioned, ugly buildings, improving the heart of the world's biggest city, is "Rockefeller City," not "Radio City," which has no meaning. Palmam qui meruit ferat.

Nature is annoyed about something. A monsoon in India drowns many.

There was a great earthquake, tidal wave and typhoon in Japan, which created havoc, while floods in Mexico caused great damage, particularly in Vera Cruz, where villages are flooded, many drowned.

Vera Cruz, the Mexican State that has dealt so harshly with Catholic priests, limiting them to fewer than 15 in a country of 1,000,000 inhabitants, had a warning recently from a volcano that had been quiet for centuries. Black clouds, loud roarings, torrents of boiling water and mud, wiping out many houses, followed now by the drowning of many villagers, will seem to the deeply religious inhabitants of Vera Cruz a direct reply to the government's anti-religious law.

The royal Princess Victoria, wife of the Duke of Brunswick, starts a restaurant in her husband's ancient castle at Gnunden in the Austrian Salzkammergut. There will be a candy store, dance floor, luncheon, open to anybody able to pay.

Victoria, only daughter of the former Kaiser, sensible and modern, would surprise her grandmother, the German Empress Frederick, and more than surprise her great-grandmother, Victoria of England.

How would you like to plow, harrow, plant, weed and seed your ground, water and feed your mules, mend your harness, pick your cotton, haul it to market, and get TWO HUNDRED AND NINETY DOLLARS IN FULL PAYMENT FOR YOUR YEAR'S WORK? That's what the average cotton farmer in the United States will get this year.

VICTIMS SLAIN MILES FROM DEATH SPOT

Four in Murder Believed Carried to the Place Where Torch Was Applied

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 12—Paul W. Voorhies, Attorney-General of Michigan, and Harry S. Toy, prosecutor for Wayne County, were expected here this afternoon to direct mobilized law agencies in the investigation of the Washtenaw County torch murders. Other developments were:

1—Finding of a white purse of one of the girl victims six miles from the lonely "lovers' lane," where the charred bodies were found. It shifted the murder scene and led to a new theory that the two high school boys and their girl companions were murdered elsewhere and their bodies carried to the isolated dirt road, where they were soaked in gasoline and cremated.

2—Wholesale raids on roadhouses and inns in the backwoods of Washtenaw County for possible murder clues and a general "cleanup" of the district. Fifty veteran State troopers comprise the raiding squad.

3—Report of University of Michigan medical officials, who performed autopsies on the bodies, that none of the four young persons had been drinking on the fatal night. Authorities admitted they had probed the possibility as there are many roadside liquor resorts in the area.

BROTHERS STILL HELD

4—Rewards totaling $5000 have been posted for the arrest of the slayers.

5—Arrest of two bachelor recluse brothers, Paul 49, and Law-

HOTEL GUEST SHOT DOWN BY BELLBOY

Dispute Over Parking Space Ends in the Murder of Former U. S. Official

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—W. Frank Norman, a former special assistant attorney-general in 1920, was shot four times today in a quarrel with Joseph A. Diggs, 31-year-old Negro, a bellboy, over a parking space at the Wardman Park Hotel. He died an hour later. Diggs surrendered.

Norman had lived at the hotel for five years.

Hotel employes told police the two had quarreled over a parking space two days ago, when he struck the bellboy twice.

FIRES FOUR SHOTS

Norman was waiting in front of the hotel for his chauffeur to take him to his office today when, police said they were informed Diggs approached from behind and fired two bullets into the lawyer's back.

"I knew I'd get you," the Negro was quoted as saying. A third shot then was fired, striking the prostrate lawyer in the head. Diggs then was said to have fired a fourth bullet into his victim's body and calmly walked back to the hotel and surrendered to a hotel detective.

CLAIMS SELF DEFENSE

Diggs told police Norman struck him once today and was ready to hit him again when he fired in self defense. Witnesses, however, said there were no blows struck.

Enoch Craig, Norman's negro chauffeur, witnessed the shooting. He struck Diggs several times as he was being led from the hotel and was subdued by hotel employes with difficulty.

Norman served as a captain of infantry in France during the war.

LEAK HERE BARED IN 'REVEL' PROBE

New Orgies of Accused Dry Agents Revealed; Action by the Grand Jury Planned

Government investigators marshalled a mass of new evidence against corrupt and inefficient members of New England's federal prohibition force today.

More high jinks revels, arranged by a criminal and participated in by agents from Boston and Providence, were revealed.

A leak at Boston headquarters of the New England district, by which bootleggers came into the possession of photographs of federal agents, was being traced.

T. M. Lee, Department of Justice investigator, came to Boston to confer with Maj. Goodnough, acting prohibition administrator, prosecuting the inquiry here. Three agents working out of Boston and two out of Providence were to be grilled.

GRAND JURY CALLED

The calling of a special grand jury at Rhode Island to hear evidence against grafting agents was forecast.

New charges were awaited at Providence, as Rhode Island's two Republican factions, responsible for the present disclosures and inquiry, continued a war of reprisal—for the conviction of James Lavelle, Pawtucket politician and income tax dodger on one hand and the removal of Alva Richardson, deputy prohibition administrator, on the other.

Newport, Narragansett and notorious dives in Rocky Point, R. I., were named as consorting places of Boston and Providence agents "on the loose" with their entertainment arranged in advance by James H. "Slim" Roberts, North Attleboro criminal, sentenced on Monday to a year in federal penitentiary.

DR. ROWLEY IS NEAR DEATH

Dr. James C. Rowley, 44, of Lynn, who is seeking by court action to regain possession of a house from his former housekeeper, Mrs. Dorothy Hannon, 32, beauty shop owner, is again in a critical condition at Lynn Hospital, it was revealed today.

A second operation has been performed and plans are being made for a blood transfusion to save his life. Worry over the court case is blamed by the doctors.

Dr. Rowley was at another hospital when the case was instituted, and later testified on his sick bed at his apartment in Broad st., where his wife, with whom he had been reconciled, was caring for him. The case is unfinished.

He was near death when he brought the suit, and it was stated that he sued for the house and other gifts so that his wife might have them after his death. Now it is feared he may die before the court makes a decision.

DANCER HAS NO LUCK IN COURT

Miss Patricia O'Leary, 23, night club dancer, just doesn't have any luck in court.

Last week she was in Newton court as defendant and was sentenced to jail for threatening a society woman in a row over her former sweetheart, Manuel Sarco, a Filipino student.

Today, in municipal court as complainant in an auto case, she heard the judge find the defendant, Jacob Gamerman of Spring st., not guilty.

The girl, clad only in a bathing suit, was driving Sarco's car one day last month when Gamerman's machine sliced the handle off one of the doors and then he left the scene, she testified.

Gamerman denied it and produced witnesses to prove he remained on the scene for 15 minutes. He said Miss O'Leary did not ask his name.

The girl is out on bail and awaiting superior court trial in the Newton case.

'L' PAYMENT TO CUT TAX RISE

State Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long has authorized the assessors of Boston to include in their estimated revenue for this year $1,020,000 which the Boston Elevated is to pay as reimbursement of an assessment of $953,000 levied on this city several years ago to meet deficits in the operating expenses of the road.

This means that there will be a decrease of 66 cents in the expected increase of taxes in Boston this year. It was expected that the tax rate would be increased $1.50 to $2 over the tax of $30.80 for 1930.

As a result of the action taken by Commissioner Long today there is now a possibility that the increase in taxes will not exceed $1.

Commissioner Long granted similar privileges to Cambridge and Watertown, both communities having been assessed for the same purpose as Boston.

Hoover Hunts Funny Book Author

Washington Aug. 12—The "Washington Merry-Go-Round," a castigating book on the administration, came under the scrutiny of President Hoover, the Washington Daily News said today.

Written anonymously, the book was published by Washington publishers who refuse to divulge the name of the author.

On orders of the President, secret service men were assigned to ferret out the author's identity but no indication was made as to what action the Chief Executive contemplated.

President Hoover was described by the author as a victim of "his own fear and vacillation."

Members of the Republican national committee were also incensed at the hot shots taken at leaders in administrative affairs.

They threatened to follow the the President's move with a request for a Congressional investigation. They charge it is the work of Democratic agencies.

4 YEARS IN JAIL FOR "LEGS"

New York, Aug. 12 (AP)—Jack (Legs) Diamond was sentenced in federal court today to four years' imprisonment and fined $11,000 for violation of the prohibition law.

Despite the fact that Diamond was one of New York's most publicized gang figures, his conviction last week together with Paul Quattrocchi marked the first time he had actually faced a prison sentence.

He was convicted on charges of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law and ownership of a 1500-gallon applejack still in Greene County, New York.

Sentence was imposed by Federal Judge Richard J. Hopkins of Kansas. He ordered that Diamond serve his sentence at the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

Counsel for Paul Quattrocchi moved that the conviction of Quattrocchi be set aside on the ground that an effort had been made by Alexander Green, an investigator for Dimond's counsel, to influence certain persons against Quattrocchi and in favor of Diamond.

Judge Hopkins denied the motion and sentenced Quattrocchi to two years at Atlanta and to pay a fine of $5000.

Diamond when called for sentence shook his head in answer to the court's question if he had any-

MASQUERADE A THRILLING LOVE DRAMA By FAITH BALDWIN IN TOMORROW'S AMERICAN

'JAIL AMERICAN FLIERS,' CRY OF JAPANESE POPULACE

WAR OFFICIALS FLOUT PLEAS FOR LENIENCY

Nipponese Authorities Ignore Suggestions of Foreign Envoys to Go Slow

Tokyo, Aug. 12 (AP)—Patriotic societies and reactionary individuals clamored today for the punishment of Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., American aviators, for taking pohotographs while flying over Japanese territory.

The two men appeared before the public procurator for further questioning, smiling but tense. Examiners questioned Pangborn about his flying experience, particularly that during his service in the American army.

FLOUTS SUGGESTIONS

Foreign oficials were reported to have taken a hand in the investigation by suggesting the judiciary show leniency, but the War Department was said to have adopted a different view.

Reactionaries sent a delegation to the procurator's office urging drastic punishment. The great Japan Production party, headed by Mitsuru Toyama, widely known patriot, sent delegations to the ministers of war, communications and foreign affairs and to the army general staff demanding no leniency be shown.

The Black Dragon Society, composed of patriots, called meetings avowedly to start a nation-wide movement urging the law be allowed to take its course.

SCOUT THEIR DENIAL

Several vernacular newspapers said the procurator had established to his satisfaction the photographing of a fortified zone by the fliers was preconceived and intentional. This was denied by Pangborn and Herndon.

COL. KNOX AND T. E. ELLIS BUY CHICAGO NEWS

Former Publisher of Hearst Papers in Boston Acquires Huge Property

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP)—Control of the Chicago Daily News was purchased today from the executors of the Walter A. Strong estate by Frank Knox, publisher of the Manchester, N. H., Union-Leader, and Theodore T. Ellis of Worcester, Mass., manufacturer and former publisher of the Worcester Telegram-Gazette.

Mr. Knox asumed his duties today as president and publisher of the News. Mr. Ellis will be vice-president of the corporation and a member of its board of directors.

Mr. Strong, publisher of the newspaper since the death of Victor Lawson, died of a heart attack May 10, leaving disposition of his estate to the discretion of three executors—his widow, Josephine Haviland Strong; Laird Bell, his personal attorney, and Holman D. Petibone, president of the Chicago Title & Trust Co.

He was a member of the Rough Riders troop in the Spanish-American War, is a former chairman of the Michigan Republican State Committee, and was appointed to the board of Indian Commissioners by President Taft. During the World War he served overseas with the 153rd Artillery.

The Daily News, an Associated Press member and one of four evening newspapers in Chicago, moved into its new monumental home on the Chicago river at Madison st., in June, 1929, and two months later acquired the Daily Journal, oldest daily in Illinois. Its circulation last month averaged 400,136.

Both Col. Knox and Ellis New Englanders

Two New England newspaper men, one by birth and the other by adoption, came into possession of the Chicago Daily News today. Frank Knox, new publisher of the News, was born in this city, and Theodore T. Ellis, vice-president, although born in St. Louis, spent most of his life in Massachusetts.

There the similarity ends. Knox, a graduate of Michigan college, entered the newspaper business by way of the editorial department of the Grand Rapids, Mich., Herald in 1898 and rose to managing editor.

Later he and John A. Muehling became publishers of the Sault Ste. Marie News and then the Manchester, N. H., Leader, and, in 1913, the Manchester Union and Leader.

ENTERED HEARST SERVICE

Later, while still retaining his interest in the Manchester papers, he entered the service of William Randolph Hearst and was publisher of the Boston American, the Boston Record and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, eventually becoming general manager of the Hearst newspaper properties, a position which he recently relinquished.

Ellis started in life as a pressman with the St. Louis Chronicle and afterward was employed by the Brockton, Mass., Enterprise and the Boston Herald. In 1900, he went to Worcester as foreman of the pressroom of the Worcester Telegram and there invented a fibre press blanket process which was to cost him his job on the Telegram but bring him a fortune.

In 1907 he perfected the blanket and began manufacturing them himself. When the late Austin P. Cristy, founder and publisher of the Telegram, learned of his outside interests, he summoned Ellis to his office and gave him his choice of continuing with the blanket manufacture or leaving the service of his newspaper.

MILLION IN CASH

Ellis chose to leave and founded the New England Fibre Blanket Co., which later became the New England Newspaper Supply Co.

For the next 11 years he continued to amass a fortune, but his liking for newspaper work never waned. On a Monday in November, 1919, he walked into Cristy's office and said:

"A. P., what will you take for the Telegram?"

"A million in cash," replied the publisher.

"Give me until Thursday," begged Ellis, and four days later he had the money for the surprised Cristy, who, nevertheless, stuck to his bargain and sold the paper.

Later Ellis bought the Gazette, an afternoon paper, and continued to publish both. The Telegram is a morning paper.

ART PATRON.

In 1925, on advice of his physician, he disposed of both to George F. Booth, one of the original owners of the Gazette, and others.

Ellis has been one of the largest contributors to philanthropy in Worcester and is regarded as one of the leading patrons of art in the United States. One of his possessions, a Raphael "Madonna," was said to have cost $500,000.

DIGHTON STONE CLAIMED BY PORTUGAL

Claimed to Be Evidence That Cortes Real Was First Settler in America

Lisbon, Aug. 12 (AP)—Deciphering an inscription on a rock on the banks of the Taunton river in Massachusetts designated as the "Dighton Stone" has revived an old Portuguese claim that the first European to settle in the United States was a Portuguese navigator.

During four centuries this stone bore upon its flank mysterious hieroglyphics, which were not deciphered until recently when an American professor, Edmund Burke DeLabarre, supplied the key.

Engraved in rough characters is the name "Corte Real," a Portuguese navigator, and the date 1511. Also the Latin words: Voluntate Die Hic Dux Indorum—which roughly translated means: "By the will of God I became here the chief of the Indians."

Capt. Miguel Corte Real set out from Lisbon at the head of an exploration party May 10, 1502. Having reached the coast of Newfoundland, he decided that his three ships should separate and explore the seas in three directions.

For some reason, two ships returned to Portugal, while the third, commanded by Corte Real, never was heard from again.

Students feel the dramatic story of Corte Real at last has been revealed by the deciphering of the inscription on the Dighton stone.

The ship, according to authentic reports, since corroborated by two other American professors, was attacked by the Indians in the Assonet region and her master captured by the Indians. But he was said to have won the good will of his captors and to have been proclaimed their chief.

Vatican Flouts Rumor of Cardnal Pacelli Resigning

Vatican City, Aug. 12 (AP)—The Vatican again denied strenuously today public reports that Cardinal Pacelli intended to resign as papal secretary of state. Rumors of his resignation have been current for several months. IRISH RAILROAD IS BLOWN UP

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 12 (AP)—Unidentified persons blew up a railroad between Ealy Bay and Cootehill last night and cut telegraph lines in a number of places, presumably to prevent a passage of trains carrying Orangemen to Derby for celebration of the raising of the siege of that city 242 years ago.

Large bodies of men, as many as 500 in one contingent, were marching into the area last night to seize the platform erected for the celebration and to prevent the meeting.

A strong force of troops was sent from Donegal and it was believed Free State authorities would ban the meeting.

Republicans in border counties seized automobiles and omnibuses and transported contingents to the scene.

Another Indictment of Prohibition Here

IF YOU ANALYZE the contents of this newspaper with intelligence, you must be impressed by the striking and distressing contrasts in the news of the day.

In one column, you find the Wickersham Report from Washington.

New England is held by it to have the cleanest police methods in the United States, free from brutality and coercion.

The police department, of Boston especially, is credited with dignity and honor and efficiency as a whole.

It commands the admiration and support of respectable people.

It commands the respect and, consequently, the fear, of criminals.

Hence the relative freedom from local crime waves that are a curse to other basically fine communities in the United States.

In the adjoining column, you find the revelations of filthy, nauseating prohibition scandals. These happen to be disclosed in Boston and Providence. But they are common to all metropolitan areas the country over. They are the underpinning on which most of the criminality of today fattens, prospers and outrages civic decency.

A judge of the United States Court at Providence solemnly requests illegal liquor dealers to come into court and reveal the systems and details of graft and corruption imposed upon them by national prohibition officials, sworn to uphold the laws they were desecrating.

It is revealed here and at Providence that——

PROHIBITION OFFICERS stole the liquors they had seized from rum-runners, became bootleggers themselves and compelled the liquor dealers to buy it from them, under threats of arrest, at the rate of $450 per ten cases.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS sought to borrow money, $300 at a whack, from the illegal liquor dealers they were supposed to arrest and prosecute.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS brought their wives and families to the bootleg joints they were supposed to raid, but to which they were themselves selling liquor surreptitiously and feasted on choice steaks and chicken dinners, washing it down with rum, whiskey, brandy and cordials they had hi-jacked from the rum-runners.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS are found by a formal investigation to "blink" at rum rings which pay them to look the other way, but diligently raid the little rum rings which fail to pay them graft.

A PROHIBITION OFFICIAL, clad in knickers, no less, is accused of accepting gratuities from two speakeasies, or rioting with girl companions, and then "double-crossing" the proprietors.

PROHIBITION OFFICIALS in Boston are accused of deliberately ignoring tips on the arrival of huge shipments of alcohol.

PROHIBITION OFFICIALS are accused of ignoring information that Belgian alcohol was being landed on the coast, in defiance of the law, of course.

DISTILLERS, learning that their distilleries were to be raided, loaded the liquor containers with dynamite, with the possibility it would deal death and destruction to innocent bystanders when the raid was effected.

What a motley, contemptible crew has gathered under the banner of prohibition.

Bootleggers, hi-jackers, prohibition officers, speakeasy proprietors, women of the street, fanatics and paid propagandists.

Nine-tenths of all the crime which this nation suffers is either the direct result or a natural bi-product of prohibition.

The news of the day shows that the average police force in New England, required to enforce law and order under local ordinances and statutes, performs its duty well when not contaminated by prohibition.

The news of the day shows that the Coast Guard and the Treasury Department, once honorable and worthy institutions, become saturated with graft under the influence of prohibition.

Disrespect of all law is accordingly nursed and engendered. A government can not survive THAT.

He gave the name of Thomas Donnelly of Lakeview ave., Lowell.

The narrowness of his escape from death was seen in a slight cut he received when the cowcatcher struck him.

Donnelly explained that he was tired but polic echarged drunkenness and the court agreed today.

U. S. GASOLINE DEMAND JUMPS

Tulsa, Okla, Aug. 12 (AP)—The petroleum industry was offered a morsel of comfort today in a survey of gasoline statistics for the first half of the year.

"It appears that the petroleum industry has been one of the most fortunate of the basic industries in the United States," said [illegible] R. Mapes, economist for the Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association in a review of the six months' period.

"Domestic trade in the industry's principal production not only has held its own with the consumption record of last year, but has actually enjoyed an increase of 2.28 per cent. Domestic demand for gasoline totalled 190,866,000 barrels for the first six months as compared with a demand of 186,639,000 barrels for the same period in 1930, an increase of 4,227,000 barrels."

Mapes pointed out a slump in gasoline exports had been a disturbing factor, and had more than offset the improvement in the domestic trade, resulting in a lessened total demand.

OWNERS BALK AT PLACING OF BOULEVARD

Proposed Location Would Assure the Citizens of More Waterfront in Future

Brighton district is stirred up over a movement to have the Brighton abbatoir removed after 30 years.

Representatives John Murphy and Leo Birmingham have been active in the movement to have the site made a playground. The Metropolitan District Commission which has control of the Charles river at Market st. and Arsenal rd. on which the Abatoir buildings abut, are being importuned to use their power to condefn the buildings and make a recreational center there.

HEARING TOMORROW

Tomorrow at 3 o'clock a hearing will be held on the subject at the commission building on Somerset st. Under an act passed by the Legislature last year the commission is empowered to make such changes in the Riverway as it sees fit. There seems to be no likelihood of the complete elimination of the slaughtering plant in the immediate future, but Birmingham and Murphy are demanding that the commission so deal with the placing of a boulevard at this time, as to leave a waterfront playground available when the land inevitably shall be taken by the state for recreational purposes.

It is said that the owners, the Butchers Slaughtering Association, want the proposed boulevard on the water side of their property, while the citizens and the representatives want the boulevard to be located in the rear of the property so as to leave the water front privileges available for the people when the property s actually taken by the State.

ON BOTH SHOULDERS

The special commission on the Charles river basin recommended the plan which the citizens favor, but suggested as an alternate route the plan favored by the owners. The decision on this point is up to the Metropolitan District Commission.

The special commission on the Charles river basin, which made the report to the Legislature, was composed of Henry L. Harriman, Henry Parkman, Jr., James W. Rollins, Arthur A. Shurtleff and George Owen.

ARMED MANIAC ATTACKS TWO

Worcester, Aug. 12 — A man forced his way into a cottage on Lake Quinsigamond early today, attacked Mrs. Elmer D. Hackett and twice stabbed her uncle who rushed to aid her.

Police believe the intruder is a maniac, perhaps an escaped inmate of the State Hospital.

William Green, 67, who was stabbed in the abdomen and right leg in a fierce struggle with the man, was taken to City Hospital. He will recover.

The cottage is situated on North Quinsigamond ave., just over the line in the town of Shrewsbury. Mrs. Hackett lives there with her small son, Dexter, and Green, who lives in Hudson, was visiting them.

She was sitting up after midnight awaiting the return of her son, and Green was sleeping upstairs, when there was a knock at the front door. Thinking it was her son, Mrs. Hackett opened it.

"As I opened the door, a man rushed at me and seized me, forcing me back into the room and closing the door behind him at the same time," she told police.

"I screamed before he could clasp his hand over my mouth and as I struggled my uncle came running down the stairs and leaped on the man's back.

"In a flash the man pulled out a knife and stabbed him. Then he ran from the house."

POSED AS LOST SON OF WOMAN IN ROCKLAND

Played Role for Three Years Before Deception Was Revealed by Police

Rockland, Me., Aug. 12—John S. White, 28, brought to an anti-climax today Maine's strangest, unsolved mystery drama.

He leaped into Rockland harbor and drowned himself.

The story will end unsolved with the anti-climax unless Andrew Griffin should come home. And that is unlikely, because Andrew Griffin, at the age of 7, vanished 15 years go without a trace, and nobody knows where he is, or if he is alive or dead.

John White was Andrew Griffin for three years, playing the imposter in Andrew Griffin's home, deceiving Andrew Griffin's mother, who believed her son really had returned.

SON DISAPPEARS.

Violence rid the nest of the cuckoo, as violence rid the nest of the O'Neill cuckoo in John Masefield's famous poem. Like "Canon-Head" O'Neill, John White, the boy, "had devil's ears."

The story had its beginning one bright May afternoon of 1916, Mrs. Mary Griffin was tending her store in Water st. Her son, Andrew, seven, was helping her.

Andrew walked out of the store. Nobody ever was found who saw him again.

Posses beat the woods and the police dragged the harbor, but there was no trace of Andrew Griffin, nor has there ever been.

PROVED "IMPOSTER"

In 1919 John White made his first appearance in Rockland. Whether he heard the story of Andrew Griffin's disappearance and deliberately played the imposter or whether Mrs. Griffin saw him passing her home, was strick by his resemblance to her son and led to believe it was he, never has been quite clear.

He gave a woman who had been heart-broken some measure of happiness in deception for a period of three years. But he has "devil's ears," he was constantly annoying the police and finally he got into serious trouble.

DEATH IS MYSTERY.

Investigation by the Maine State police established that he was an imposter, that he was really John White, a native of Brownville Junction, former resident of Bangor.

Until a few months ago, nothing was heard of John White again. He suddenly reappeared here. He took up abode on a lobster smack, the Virginia. He did not go near Mrs. Andrew.

Today he jumped into the harbor. Witnesses saw him. Why he killed himself is a mystery. Why he ever came back here is a mystery. And what became of Andrew—that is a mystery, too.

RETAIL TRADE 50 BILLIONS A YEAR IN U. S.

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—Retail trade of the United States amounts to approximately $50,000,000,000 a year on the basis of a fragmentary report by the Census Bureau covering 13 states.

Sales in these States, which include Alabama, Arizona, California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Missouri, Rhode Island and Washington amount to $10,480,204,352.

If the percentage of sales for these states is applied to the country, the bureau pointed out, the total would be $50,033,850,792.

AUTO SALES LEAD

In the nine commodity groups in the survey, automobiles accounted for 21.47 cents of the public's retail dollar followed closely by the food group, which took 21.8 cents. General merchandise accounted for 14.03 per cent of total sales, and wearing apparel, 8.01 per cent. Other groups follow:

Furniture and household, 4.48 per cent; restaurants and eating establishments, 4.34 per cent; lumber and building, 6.72 per cent; other retail stores, 19.36 per cent, and second hand stores, .41 per cent.

TORCH MOB THREAT

rence Keene, 38, who have steadfastly maintained their innocence.

6—A private citizen, above reproach, came forward to claim a high powered coupe confiscated as the murder car. He explained that the motor failed and that he had abandoned it for the night.

Washtenaw County deputy sheriff, E. L. Squires, revealed the police theory.

"The assassins killed Lore and at least overpowered young Wheatley at the spot where the purse was found, in my opinion," he said. "Then they drove with Wheatley and Lore and the girls to the county line road where the car was found and attacked the girls there."

ATTACKED IN AUTO

Squires offered the theory that the two couples had driven to the spot in the "lover's lane," had parked there, and had been attacked by the slayers.

When Lore, the larger of the two young men, attempted to fight off the assailants he was shot and Wheatley beaten unconscious.

Search of the ditch and road where the purse was found failed to show any signs of a struggle, indicating, Squires said, that the young men were overpowered in their car.

The theory was borne out by the autopsy by University of Michigan pathalogists, which revealed in addition to bullet wounds in Lore's head and chest, the fast that Wheatley and the two young women had been beaten over the head.

SEEN IN RESTAURANT

Attempting to trace the movements of the four young people between the time they dropped out of sight in Ypsilanti and the discovery of their bodies officials learned today that the two couples were in a restaurant in Milan, 15 miles south of Ypsilanti, between two and three o'clock Tuesday morning.

Norman England, a waiter in the restaurant, said the boys and girls were in the restaurant about that time, and that a man was with them.

Meanwhile, police announced that two suspects had been released; but still are holding the Keene brothers.

TWO MEN RELEASED

The suspects released were two men about 27 and 30. Police refused to divulge their names, but it was learned the pair had been taken into custody in a roadhouse because of circumstances which authorities would not disclose. They did admit, however, investigating a fight there recently.

The Keenes were arrested on suspicion late yesterday as they were discovered washing their blood-stained clothing and scraping blood off two heavy clubs, according to state police and sheriff's officers.

MOB OF 2000 GATHERS

Grilled throughout the night, the Keene brothers, attired in overalls and in their bare feet, maintained their innocence. Both declared that "we were dead drunk at the time." The brothers live in a shack on wheels.

While authorities last night were questioning the Keene brothers inside the Washtenaw jail here, an angry mob of more than 2000 gathered on the outside. Men congregated in small groups and whispered of lynching. All entrances to the jail were under guard.

The autopsy strengthened the belief of Sheriff Jacob B. Andres of Washington county and other investigators that the party met death in a desperate resistance to an attack which had as its motive either robbery or an assault on the girls. Associated with Sheriff Andres in the inquiry were state police and officers of Wayne county (Detroit) since the crime was committed on a road which separates the two counties.

ONE SHOT, 3 CLUBBED

University of Michigan pathologists, who examined the badly charred bodies, reported that Harry Lore, 16, of Ypsilanti, one of the victims, had been shot to death. The other three, Thomas Wheatley, a farm youth of the neighborhood; Vivian Gold, 15, and Anna May Harrison of Cleveland, they found, were beaten to death or into insensibility before the bodies were placed in Lore's car, their clothing saturated with gasoline and the automobile set afire.

Lore and Miss Gold were cousins, and the two girls had been visiting in the Lore home. The couples were last seen alive about 8 p. m. Monday in Ypsilanti, a few miles from the place where the bodies were found nine hours later by a farmer who was aroused by the fire.

TRACE MOVEMENTS.

While Prosecutor Albert J. Rapp of Wastenaw County and Assistant Prosecutor Miles N. Culehan of Detroit were questioning the Keene brothers last night sheriff's officers visited dance halls and resorts in an effort to trace the couples' movements.

Indications were found by officers that another automobile followed Lore's machine, cut in front and forced it to stop with its front wheels near the ditch.

Officers reasoned that the attack might have been made by occupants of the other car. From whatever sourse or motive the attack came, they believed Lore, a husky youth, gave the first resistance and was shot down. The autopsy showed Wheatley's skull was fractured. The condition of the girls' blood showed they had been beaten.

Until recent weeks there had been numerous reports of "petting party bandits," committing robberies among couples parked on roads in the Detroit area, but no instances of violence.

A reward of $1000 for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the slayers has been offered by the Detroit News.

Police search of the isolated scene of the tragedy revealed a partially filled bottle of wine in the underbrush. A half barrel of wine similar to that in the bottle was found in the Keene hut, according to State police. The two brothers had been making wine and "moonshine" since they were thrown out of employment several months ago, the State police said.

WAR ON DANCE HALLS.

Even if released as suspects in the gruesome murders, the Keenes will face prohibition charges.

For a year and a half the brothers have led a hermit-like existence in a shanty on wheels near the spot where the two boys and two girls were found cremated in the automobile early yesterday.

Frank Walker, corporal in the state police, and Deputy Sheriff Lynn Squires, who made the arrests, said they crawled up behind the Keenes near their shanty and watched them washing their clothes and removing caked blood from the clubs. The officers said they found two rifles in the shanty.

One result of the quadruple-killing was a call for a sweeping drive against dance halls, blind pigs and road houses in Washtenaw County. It was hoped the foray might yield clues to the slayings.

TRAIL IS LOST.

The Keene brothers are illiterate and work only occasionally as laborers. Paul Keene told his questioners he had never attended school. He was quoted as saying neither he nor his brother could drive a car.

Not the least baffling part of the mystery is where the couples spent the night. They were first reported to have attended a motion picture show in Ypsilanti during the evening, but Prosecutor Rapp said the ticket taker knew the boys and they had not been there.

The inquiry being made at dance halls in the vicinity is based on the theory that they visited some of them and were followed by the persons who eventually killed them.

That they had been parked on the lonely road less than two hours was shown by the statement of Wadislow Pokriefka, a truck gardener, living nearby, who said he drove along the road between 3:15 and 3:30 a. m. and saw no car parked there.

The light of the burning car was first noticed by Harvey Santura, a farmer living nearby, at about 5 a. m.

DRY 'SQUEALER' FEARS FOR LIFE

Providence, Aug. 12—James H. "Slim" Roberts, federal dry force informer, is in fear of his life if forced to serve a year in Atlanta pententiary to which he was sentenced Monday.

His fear is based on the imprisonment there of four former hijacking confederates against whom he turned government witness.

From Cranston jail, where he is awaiting transfer to Atlanta, Roberts today filed, through his attorney, a petition in federal court asking that he be imprisoned anywhere except at the penitentiary to which he was sentenced.

He sets forth that the men he convicted, Mike Marelli, Joe Green, Dutch Leonard and Johnny Campbell, are serving long-term sentences there.

With them he hijacked a liquor load from a federal warehouse two years ago. He received a probationary two-year sentence which was revoked on Monday when the investigation of corruption among federal dry agents revealed his illicit contacts between them and bootleggers.

thing to say.

The court fixed bail pending appeal at $15,000 for Diamond and at $7500 for Quattrocchi. The bonds were posted.

After imposing sentence, Judge Hopkins directed the district attorney's office to place evidence adduced at the trial showing violations of the Jones law before the federal grand jury.

"I would be remiss in my duty if I did not suggest to the district attorney that evidence showing possession, transportation and sale in violation of the Jones act be laid before the federal grand jury," he said.

"The defendants, if convicted of crimes brought to light through the evidence in this case would be liable to far more severe punishment than that possible on the conspiracy count. They might be sentenced to 30 to 40 years."

If the man who took the fruit to a sick friend and then ate it all himself had forced the sick friend to pay for it, he would have been very like these dry agents.

"Slim" Roberts, under a two-year suspended sentence in federal court at the time and the confidant of Deputy Administrator Richardson, quoted two weeks ago on charges kept secret, was the ideal master-of-ceremonies for these affairs.

TRACE PICTURE "LEAK"

How Boston bootleggers and speakeasy proprietors came into possession of snapshots of certain federal agents who were above corruption was one phase under inquiry.

The condition was found to exist here several months ago, when an undercover squadron of six federal cleanup agents popped into Boston while local police were experiencing considerable difficulty obtaining evidence at the alleged speakeasy of "Beano" Breen and others.

This investigation was undertaken to determine why the local federal force, during all its existence, had gathered evidence against only six of a score of prominent Boston rum traffickers. The answer made be found in the present probe.

Department of Justice Agent Lee, active in Providence at the behest of Amos W. W. Woodcock, national prohibition administrator, shifted his inquiry to Boston today.

TO QUIZ RAIDERS

It was expected that he and Maj. Goodnough would question Agents Bowlin and Richards, of Providence, named in connection with a $450 sale of liquor to a Warwick, R. I., restaurant keeper, and the three Boston agents named in secret affidavits of seven Rhode Island bootleggers.

Although there is no regular sitting of the federal grand jury in Rhode Island until October, it appeared quite probable that a special session would be called by U. S. Atty. Boss and his assistant, Edward F. McElroy.

A number of dismissals and a complete shakeup of the personnel of the New England dry force was expected first, however.

The Boston Evening American was informed today that a war of reprisal between the two powerful Republican factions in Rhode Island was responsible for bringing the disgraceful conditions to light.

The first action followed the prosecution and final conviction of James Lavelle, of Pawtucket, sentenced recently to 18 months at Atlanta for evading his income tax in the years 1924-28 inclusive.

Lavelle was prominent politically and associated politically with William C. Pelkey, chairman of the Rhode Island Republican committee, and with Frederick S. Peck, state finance commissioner.

Lavell's faction countered with an attack on Deputy Prohibition Administrator Richardson.

Richardson was in a spot, anyway. Two years ago he was indicted for conspiracy after he had visited the Tiverton estate of Herbert Carvacca, convicted bootlegger and aviation enthusiast.

Richardson said he went there in his official capacity to observe conditions. Carvacca said he received him as such until Richardson gave a signal to some men who had accompanied him and remained in hiding.

MACHINE GUN USED

When the men emerged from their hiding places Carvacca said he recognized them as hijackers. They were not federal agents, he said.

Whatever they were, somebody opened fire on them with a machine gun and they beat a hasty retreat.

Indicted, Richardson stood on his rights as a federal agent to be tried in federal court. The case was postponed a number of times. Finally the indictment was nol prossed.

He subsequently was shot at by rum runners in Cumberland and Olneyville. It was his gun, police reported, that "Slim" Roberts was carrying when he was arrested 18 months ago at the wheel of an auto, allegedly drunk, with a bottle of liquor.

Federal agents and an assistant federal attorney visited the police station and no charge was preferred against Roberts, then an informer for the federal men.

The political faction seeking reprisal for Lavell's prosecution brought their charges against Richardson to a head two weeks ago. Administrator Woodcock went to Providence from Washington to sit at a secret hearing and Richardson was ousted.

Agent Bowlin, accused of selling liquor, is reported to have admitted to investigators that he "sat in" with Richardson and several Rhode Island politicians at poker and drinking parties, the liquor being furnished by Richardson.

WILKINS' SHIP AGAIN HALTED FOR REPAIRS

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS Commander of the Wilkins-Ellsworth Trans-Arctic Submarine Expedition.

Copyright, 1931, Throughout the World by New York American, Inc., Hearst Enterprises, Inc., and King Features, Inc. All Rights Reserved. Production Prohibited in Whole or in Part.

Radio via American News Corporation and Radio-Marine Corporation—Aboard submarine Nautilus Aug. 12—The Nautilus again encountered trouble with her power section on the voyage northward to Spitzbergen, but repairs have been effected.

At 7 p. m. Greenwich time (3 p. m., E. D. T.), the Nautilus was lying at Skjervoey, which is about 60 miles from Tromsoe, Norway.

The engineers are adjusting the fuel injection valves, although there is no trouble with the fuel itself.

Two hours after we left Tromsoe, we stopped to charge our batteries, and then the field resistance burned out. This was replaced with a spare, but at that time, the port engine gave trouble.

Throughout the night the engineers worked over the source of the trouble and made repairs which proved unsatisfactory.

As the best means of effecting satisfactory repairs we proceeded to Skjervoey on the starboard engine. Here Pilot Brievold left us, and we will remain to readjust our engines and charge our batteries and air flasks.

This will probably take eight hours, and we expect soon to be in good condition to proceed to Advent Bay.

DIRECTOR CITES WIFE THREAT

Los Angeles, Aug. 12 (AP)—Legal precedent was cited to show that a person is not in contempt of court if his disputed action was committed in good faith, in a brief on file today in district court by attorneys for Josef von Sternberg, film director.

Von Sternberg, haled into court by his former wife, Riza, who charged failure to pay alimony, said he had refused to pay the money because she had "harrassed" him and Marlene Dietrich, German film star, with the threat of filing a $500,000 alienation of affections suit and a $100,000 suit against Miss Dietrich.

The director, in his brief, said he had been advised by his attorneys not to pay his former wife's alimony until the suits, which Mrs. Von Sternberg said she was to file in New York in October, had been settled.

COTTON MAY GO TO WASTE

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 12 (AP)—The South today gave thought to suggestions that it throw away a third of its 1931 cotton crop as one solution to the surplus problem complicated by the government's forecast of a 15,000,000 instead of a 10,000,000-bale production this year.

Varied comment camef rom official and unofficial sources on the proposal of Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo of Mississippi, that a third of the 1931 cotton be left unpicked in the fields.

D. A. Jewell, president of a cotton mill at Chickamauga, Ga., followed Gov. Bilbo's suggestion by launching a campaign to cause cotton planters to plow up every third row of cotton. He said he had enlisted the support of Gov. Richard B. Russell, Jr., of Georgia.

Gov. B. M. Miller of Alabama, suggested that Gov. Bilbo's proposal was "unsound."

Catholic T. A. Union Elects Officers

Torrington, Ct., Aug. 12 (INS)—The Catholic Total Abstinence Union, in convention here, elected as officers Rev. Edward J. Lxng of Philadelphia, president; Thomas Nolan, Pittsfield, Mass.; Mrs. L. M. Ryan, Baltimore, and Mrs. Mary B. Finan, Chicago, vice-presidents; Thomas McCloskey, Danbury, secretary; Thomas Fitzgerald, Philadelphia, treasurer.

The convention adopted resolutions on the death of Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan of Okland, N. J., who died here while the convention was awaiting his arrival.

Wife About to Rewed Has Disappeared

Philadelphia, Aug. 12 (AP)—Police aid was sought today in the search for a 19-year-old wife, Mrs. Mary Greenleaf, who was to have been remarried tonight at a church ceremony and has not been seen since she left the home of her parents.

An elopement about a week ago resulted in her marriage to Walter Greenleaf. In her parked automobile was a note addressed to her parents advising them not to worry. She said she would return shortly.

Fate is cruel to many of the Follies girls. Their perfect faces and figures appear to be fatal gifts. Some have been mysteriously killed or have met with beauty-destroying accidents. You will find complete details in an interesting article in the American Weekly in the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Heroine

Helen Watson, a 20-year-old Richmond, Cal., girl, was a heroine after she saved seven persons from drowning when their automobile plunged into a river. Miss Watson was a passenger in machine. (International Newsreel photo.)

EXTRA SESSION NOW REGARDED AS ASSURED

Washington, Aug. 12 (INS)—Although the White House continues to deny that President Hoover will call a special session of Congress under any circumstances, the impression is growing in the capital that eventually it will be found advisable to bring the legislators to Washington several weeks in advance of the regular date of convening, Dec. 7.

Factors contributing to the growing belief that Congress will have to get an early start are:

The organization snarl. Control of both houses teeters on the edge of uncertainty. There will be considerable waste of time before it can be developed whether the Republicans or Democrats are going to control the Congress.

The necessity of Congress approving the debt moratorium before December 15, the date on which German and allied payments to the U. S. Treasury fall due.

"Democrats to Rule"

San Francisco, Aug. 12 (AP)—United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana predicts the Democrats will control the next House of Representatives and, doing so, will bring about the election of a Democratic President in 1932.

Big Peace and Little Peaces

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Notes of the London conference as jotted down by our diplomatic spy:

France wants to see what all the gold in the world looks like in one lump.

The Scotch refuse to exchange prisoners unless they get two for one.

The Cuban revolution was captured in Atlantic City.

Only one diplomat is named Edge. But they're all close to it.

There can be no peace until the diplomats have visited all the European vacation resorts at their governments' expense.

Germany is baking the Soviet a cake for the anniversary of the five-year plan. It's made of flour and dynamite and Poland wants to light the candles.

Ambassador Edge is off for the Moors to shoot grouse. There's a clause in the disarmament treaty that enables him to carry a shot-gun if he pulls the trigger with his eyes closed.

'HUMAN CORK'S' FLOAT SECRET DIES WITH HIM

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 12 (AP)—Angelo Faticoni has gone to his death without revealing the secrets of the art which earned him the sobriquet of the "human cork."

Faticoni, whose ability to stay afloat in water for hours while weighted down, attracted considerable attention, died at St. Vincent's Hospital, Jacksonville, Fla. He was 72 years old.

The stories of Faticoni's floating feats were numerous. Once he was sewed into a bag and thrown into the water with a 20-pound cannon ball attached at his feet. His head reappeared soon afterward and he remained motionless in that position for eight hours. On another occasion he swam across the Hudson river tied to a chair weighted with lead.

Faticoni planned to reveal his secrets before his death, but for some unknown reason failed to do so. He had expressed the opinion frequently that anyone could perfect the art of floating.

Once he performed before students and members of the faculty at Harvard.

Film Progress Is Shown

As an added attraction this week, in addition to the regular show, Manager E. A. Vinson of the Scollay announces the showing of "The House That Shadows Built." This reel shows the tiny Lasky studio of 20 years ago, and the great growth of this organization. It has "shots" of such famous celebrities as Sarah Bernhardt, Raymond Hackett, Dustin Farnum, Eliot Dexter.

The reel is interesting. An added touch is provided by a glimpse of what the public may see the coming season from Paramount-Publix. The reel is shown in collaboration with the 20th birthday of Paramount Pictures. It may also be seen at the Modern and Beacon Theaters.

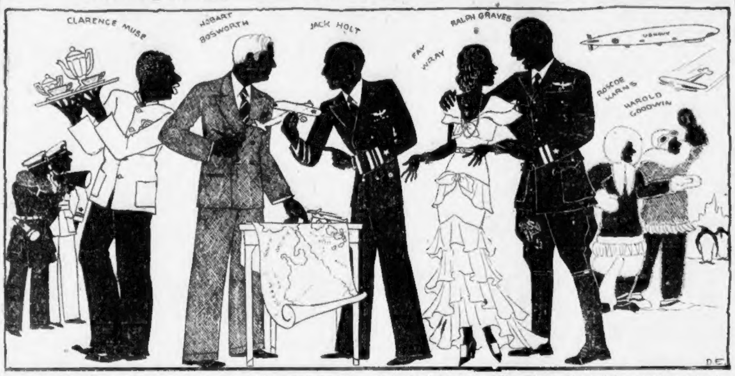
Marie Dressler's Latest at the Orpheum Friday

The grand old lady of the screen, Marie Dressler, co-starred with Polly Moran in "Politics," is the feature attraction at Loew's Orpheum beginning next Friday. Headlining the vaudeville show is Moss and Frye in a comedy skit, "How High Is Up," with Caeser Rivoli and Co., next on the bill.

Opposite Quillan

Maureen O'Sullivan has been borrowed by RKO Pathe from Fox as leading woman for Eddie Quillan in his next picture, tentatively titled, "The Big Shot." Hal Conklin and George Drumgold wrote the story and Ralph Murphy is to direct.

PRINCIPALS IN GRIPPING FILM AT KEITH'S



Shown for the first time at popular prices, "Dirigible" is thrilling patrons of RKO Keith's this week. Heading the cast are Jack Holt, Ralph Graves and Fay Wray. Many of the scenes were made at the U. S. Navy's aerial station at Lakehurst, N. J.

Waldron's Casino

Charles Waldron announces that he will re-open Waldron's Casino for the season about the middle of this month, continuing his usual policy of burlesque, vaudeville and talking pictures, running continuously from 12:30 to 10:30 daily. He is busy now booking his attractions and keeping an eye on extensive renovations and redecorating of the theater.

New Features for Met

Sylvia Froos, "the girl with a smile in her voice," and "Pansy the Horse," will appear as added attractions to Horace Heidt and his Californians at the Metropolitan Friday. "Pansy the Horse" was a hit of "Wake Up and Dream." Heidt and his Californians will have an entirely new show.

A special matinee for children will be given at the theater Saturday morning. "Huckleberry Finn," with its peculiar appeal to children of all ages, will be shown on the screen, featuring Jackie Coogan, Jackie Searl, Mitzi Green and Junior Durkin. Two episodes of the serial picture, "The Vanishing Legion," will also be shown at this special matinee.

Laurel and Hardy on State Screen Friday

Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy will be seen in their first full length picture, "Pardon Us," at Loew's State beginning Friday. The story is a travesty on a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer prison melodrama that took the theater world by storm.

Polly Moran

Polly Moran is moving to a busier street than the end of Hollywood boulevard. She said her mother complained of not having enough cars going by to watch. Polly's new house is in Beverly Hills.

Rebound Topic Is Settled

The Great American public is wrong again.

The correct pronunciation of Ina Claire's picture is not "Re-bound," but "Rebound," according to Edward H. Griffith, director.

"Not one person visiting on the set has pronounced 'Rebound' with the last syllable accented," Mr. Griffith says. "One day we brought out the dictionary and settled the question forever."

IVAN LEBEDEFF HEADS CAST OF RUSSIAN FILM

Prince Role for New Star

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 12—A spectacular Russian drama, portraying the battle between the aristocrats and the proletarians, is being planned by Radio Pictures.

Louella O. Parsons

Hollywood's own Russian aristocrat, Ivan Lebedeff, will be the bright and shining star of this big number. Mr. Lebedeff has more to his credit it seems, than proficiency in hand-kissing and monocle wearing. He is a successful actor.

In fact, William Le Baron is so enthusiastic over him that he is starring him in what is scheduled to be Radio's biggest drama of the year. The story is by Gerrit Lloyd, for many years D. W. Griffith's right hand man and one of the authors of "Abraham Lincoln." Jack Lloyd, as he is known to his pals, has been reading intensively and doing some special research work on the birth of the Soviet government, all of which will be featured in "The Happy Prince." Yes, that's the title—and it's to be produced on a lavish scale.

Goodness, I haven't heard about John Wray since he covered himself with glory in a Norma Talmadge picture and then repeated his performance for Universal. I thought he was back on the stage but apparently he is due here in Hollywood to play one of the leading male roles in "I Spy," Lil Dagover's first. In fact, Mr. Wray is one of the male leads. That reminds me that I received a letter from Bess Meredyth who has gone to Europe to meet her husband, Mike Curtiz's family. Bess is getting all ready to meet the in-laws and if they don't like our Bess, well, there is something wrong with them. She and Mike are due to get back August 18 at which time he will report at First National for Miss Dagover's first American picture. "I Spy" is being adapted from the German with Harvey Thew and B. Mandelstamm doing the work.

Seen and Heard

La Belle Swanson has cabled Samuel Goldwyn suggesting that "Sadie Thompson" be remade in a talkie version. Sam likes the idea and there is a strong possibility that Gloria's most successful silent picture will soon have dialogue. Somerset Maugham, in his short story, furnished some good lines and what is to prevent Gloria from using them? There is a story that Paramount has been doing some negotiating with Clara Bow. But you know a burned child dreads the fire, so I think it is very doubtful if Clara will listen to Paramount's offer. When she was ill a statement was sent out that Miss Bow "was finished" and that little phrase has hurt Clara as nothing else in the world. A strong rumor concerning threats of blackmail and a movie publication are said to be in the hands of the district attorney.

STAR MUST LEARN TO WALK

Joan Bennett, film actress, who must learn how to walk all over again as the result of being thrown from a saddle horse. She injured her hip and must remain in the hospital for at least two months. Doctors say the injury will result in no permanent disability.

JOAN BENNETT IS CRIPPLED

Hollywood, Cal., Aug. 12 (AP)—Joan Bennett, screen actress, must learn to walk again.

The screen player, now a hospital patient as the result of being thrown from a horse during the filming of a motion picture two weeks ago, is suffering from a fractured hip and spine injury.

Her physician said the latter injury will make it necessary for her to learn how to walk again, but that she will suffer no permanent disability.

Miss Bennett, a sister of Constance and Barbara Bennett of the films, probably will be in the hospital for at least eight more weeks.

Ex-Yale Grid Star New 'Y' Council Head

Cleveland, Aug. 12 (AP)—A Yale football center on the '97 and '98 teams, who was a major in the World War, was the new president today of the Y. M. C. A. National Council of the United States. He is Dr. George B. Cutten, 57, president of Colgate University. He succeeds Francis S. Harmon, editor of the Hattiesburg, Miss., American.

Royalty's Acrobat Dies in Ohio at 78

Columbus, O., Aug. 12 (AP)—Adolph Reisley, 78, formerly a member of the Livingston Brothers acrobatic team, once an internationally famous quartet, died here of a paralysis stroke.

For more than 40 years he had appeared in command performances before Emperor Wilhelm of Germany, Czar Nicholas II of Russia, and the Emperor of Japan.

Cop Kills Wife, Niece and Shoots Himself

Troy, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—John J. Drohan, policeman attached to the office of the corporation counsel, shot and killed his wife and eight-months-old infant today and then shot himself in the chest at the home of her parents. Hospital physicians said he was not dangerously wounded. Drohan did not know the bullet that killed his wife also killed the child.

The bullet that killed Mrs. Drohan penetrated a wall, killing her niece, asleep in a crib.

DREISER INDICTMENT INDICTS WRITER
By Gilbert Seldes

NEITHER THE CLOUDY EMINENCE of Theodore Dreiser nor the mixture of dullness and distinction in the movie version of "An American Tragedy," justifies all the excitement which has been going on for more than five years in this connection. The justification lies elsewhere. It lies in the original story of Chester Gillette, who killed the girl who was bearing his child and was put to death for his crime by the State of New York many years ago; and it lies in the clash of two fundamental ideas: The idea that society is responsible for the criminals it makes, versus the idea of human responsbility, which you may call free will.

GILBERT SELDES

Relishing Misery

The mind of Dreiser is full of the ideas of the 1890's; he suffers not only from the prejudices of that time, but from its enthusiasms. I mean the joy which that era found in proclaiming the joylessness of life, the active pleasure in crying out that pleasure is all vain and an illusion, the bright look with which pessimists proclaim that there is no brightness. And I might add, the furious wilfulness with which they proclaim that man has no will of his own. Himself a realist, solemn, sincere, plodding and dull, he makes life in his books duller than it can ever be, but more impressive. The story of Chester Gillette wrings your heart; the story of Clyde Griffith—the fictional parallel in "An American Tragedy"—wrings your heart and depresses you, too.

• • •

Whose Fault?

Mr. Dreiser wanted to indict society and protested that the moving picture indicted only one man. As a result of his protests (I am told) the picture is better than it would have been if left alone; certainly it attempts to show us how poverty, the chaos of early life, the cruelty of the properous, and an unappeased longing for life, combined to catch Clyde Griffith in a net from which he attempted to escape by murder.

The book and the picture, both, are a little tricky when it comes to the point; they both show that murder was intended at the beginning; but neither one makes it clear that murder was intended, or done, at the end. We know that Clyde wanted the unfortunate Roberta dead; we know that when the boat overturned, he made no attempt to save her. Was the upsetting of the boat accidental or was it willed? Was it an accident which corresponded to an unconscious intention?

• • •

Dreiser, Perhaps?

The picture certainly does not give you the sense that the boy's fanatical parents, his rich and disdainful relatives, and the whole social system of the factory town are as much to blame as himself for the crime. This is partly due to certain defects in the picture, but it is largely due to Dreiser himself. He, individually, thinks the environment causes the boy to act as he does; he says so, he reaches into science and philosophy to persuade you that he is right. But he doesn't convince. He convinces you that a district attorney, eager for re-election, may make evidence; but not that the legal system, or any other system, is more vicious than those who strike out against it.

The idea that we have absolute choice—free will—and the idea that we have no freedom whatever, are both natural and both unproved assumptions. When you think of the meanness and viciousness of some human beings, you may justifiably say that they must be acting deliberately, choosing to be brutal and bestial; and, also observing the same foulness, you may say that no one could will any such black depravity, and therefore people must be the slaves of circumstances—and predestined damnation.

The Philosophy of "As If"

We live, usually, on a tight rope between the two ideas. What we are proud of, we say we wanted to do; what we regret, we say we had to do. But no matted what philosophical or religious idea we accept, in actual practice individuals and society both pretend that man is a responsible being. We act as IF we were free because that gives us the greatest satisfaction; and if we are willing to take the satisfaction, we ought to be willing to take the punishment.

And if Mr. Dreiser's idea is that it's too bad that Roberta was killed and it is too bad that Clyde was killed, and if you go back to first causes, everybody is equally to blame and life is only a lot of atoms dancing a meaningless and endless dance—then the answer to him is only that to find the end—which is the purpose and the meaning of the dance—is exactly the function of the philosopher and the artist. It may be another illusion—but it can be a mighty fine one.

Lines to a Wretch Who Swallowed a Glass of 1820 Brandy at One Gulp

What boots contrition or lament
  Or pangs of conscience that attack us!
Forgiveness never can be sent
  The brazen boor who blasphemes Bacchus!
Vain every cry for pardon said;
  No plea of ignorance excuses
The fool who fails to bow his head
  Before the juice of juices.
Foul infamy or vilest rape——
  These things may be in time forgiven;
But he who desecrates the grape
  No more can mingle with the shriven.
The blackest grief, the bitterest tears
  Avail him nothing: hell hath beckoned
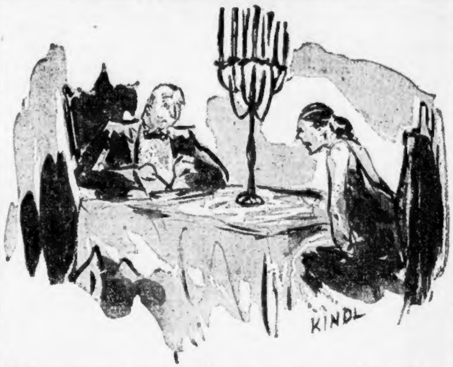
The wretch who takes one hundred years
  And downs them in a second!

Michael Flagg.



"Don't eat any more onions if you're going out, dear—we don't want the elevator man to know all our affairs."

Monet, Manet
By Charles H. Towne

FROM THE PRESS of William Edwin Rudge come two small volumes in the series of The World Masters, which hitherto have included such painters as Gainsborough, Rubens, Durer, Velesquez, El Greco, and Cezanne; and now we have Monet and Manet. There are reproductions of their best-known paintings—photographic reproductions, of course, but none the less inspiring and beautiful.

Charles H. Towne

This series is a pocket edition, and I can think of nothing more useful to the enthusiastic art students than these tiny volumes, which may be tucked in one's coat and pulled out to study with profit and pleasure. Both books contain splendid, through brief, introductions by Anthony Bertram.

We all remember with what enthusiasm George Moore has written of Monet and Manet, getting their names so mixed on the pages of his famous Trilogy that it was as confusing as if there had been two poets, one Noyes and the other Nayes. But for more reasons than this these great painters have ever been linked. They were considered radicals, pioneers, and their artistic voices cried out in the wilderness. Each has influenced innumerable painters who followed them. Our own Glackens felt their wonder, as one can discern who looks at his group pictures.

The radicals of yesterday are the conservatives of tomorrow: and looking at Manet's paintings now, one wonders why he created such a storm and was so villified. Mr. Bertram says of him:

"A color was for him a lovely thing, not to be led up and away from by a series of semi-tones that interefered with its brilliance, but to be given free space to play in; paint was a lovely thing, not to be messed about with, but to be firm and clear as it was in Velasquez; and to be paint. And to be paint—that was one of his crimes. You could see the paint when the picture was finished, if you could call it finished. There it was, as obviously paint and paint of a certain color, as the gold ground of an Italian primitive was gold. Was there not something indecent about his frankness, this obvious delight of the craftsman in his material?"

The much discussed "Le Dejeurner sur l'Herbe" and "l'Olympe" are, of course, reproduced; and for all the sensation they made in their day, how tame and sweetly beautiful they are now to us! That these nudes shocked and even terrified the critics of yesterday seems incomprehensible in the light of a wider knowledge and sanity.

• • •

Manet lived to be an old man; Monet died in his prime. The latter was the forerunner of the impressionists. His qualities can be very little appreciated from photographs. As Mr. Bertram truly states:

"It was one result of his outlook and method that he reproduces more unsatisfactorily than any other artist except perhaps Turner.

"And that fact demonstrates more clearly than anything else the essential weakness of the impressionist ideals. In seeking after the beauty and wonder of light all sacrifices were made: line, volume and construction—those qualities which photograph—were almost entirely lost. . . . The impressionists rode a theory to death, but beauty was engendered in the furious energy of their riding."

Outdoor Opera Hit
By Deems Taylor

RAVINIA PARK, ILL.—Say "outdoor opera" to the average easterner, and he looks knowing and a little scornful. You don't have to tell him anything about outdoor opera. He knows. A ball-ground or a college stadium; ten thousand spectators lost in a grandstand that was built to hold fifty; Aida, with a cast picked for lung power rather than subtlety, and an orchestra picked up from God knows where.

Deems Taylor

The music fighting a game but losing battle with distant trolley cars and taxis, trucks, impatient klaxons, sentimental cats, despondent dogs, and the cash registers of the pop stands. The scenery and costumes rented for the occasion—and looking it. And always the haunting possibility of an ill-timed thunderstorm that will blow the whole production over the outfield bleachers.

Easterners ought to get about more. Outdoor opera on the Chicago North Shore is opera produced under practically ideal conditions—conditions that make indoor opera seem a bit tame in retrospect.

Twenty miles north of Chicago—about as far, as the train flies, as Greenwich or Oyster Bay are from Manhattan—is Ravinia Park. It is not an amusement park, literally speaking, for it offers neither roller coasters nor shore dinners; but it does offer fields, and groves, and a welcome for picnic parties, and no "Keep Off the Grass" sings.

Also it offers an outdoor theater and an opera company, both run by an extraordinary man named Louis Eckstein.

• • •

Piper Pays Piper

Now it is possible for the diligent searcher to find men willing to finance opera companies, and it is hard to avoid tripping over men who are willing to run them; but to find one who is willing both to pay the piper and handle the piper's affairs is a harder task. Eckstein does it.

As director, he engages the artists and the orchestra, dictates the repertoire, and generally handles the business and artistic affairs of the organization. As chief guarantor, he gives the director a free hand, encourages him to commit all necessary extravagances, and cheerfully pays most of the annual deficit incurred by his aesthetic alter ego.

This has been going on since 1911. Twenty years ago Louis Eckstein took over a bandstand that stood in the Ravinia grounds, and rebuilt it as a theater. For some time the entertainment offered was miscellaneous in character, ballets, concerts, whatnot. From playing operatic excerpts, Ravinia progressed to the production of scenes, and occassionally whole acts, from opera. For the past decade the house has been given over exclusively to the production of grand opera.

It is curious, in a way, that New Yorkers do not know more about Ravinia, for the organization is much more closely related to New York than Chicago. The company is practically an abridged version of the Metropolitan Opera House.

New York Atmosphere

This season's principals, for example, include Lucretia Bori, Elizabeth Rethberg, Ina Burskaya, and Julia Claussen, all of the Metropolitan. Florence Macbeth represents the Chicago Company, and Yvonne Gall has been imported from the Paris Opera. Among the men are Edward Johnson, Giovanni Martinelli, Mario Charmlee, Louis d'Angelo, and George Cehanovsky. The staff of conductors—Gennaro Papi, Louis Hasselmans and Wilfred Pelletier—is solidly Metropolitan.

The visiting New Yorker can count upon feeling thoroughly at home from the moment he goes to buy his ticket; for the box-office staff has been imported intact from the Metropolitan. Much of the scenery, too, is either Metropolitan scenery cut down to fit the second generation, or newly built sets based on the Metropolitan's designs.

Only the orchestra will be strange to the visitor. But strange only in personnel; for, good as the Metropolitan orchestra is, the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, which occupies the pit at Ravinia during the Summer, can hold its own, both in flexibility and tonal quality.

The season lasts ten weeks, starting in June and closing early in September. There are no matinees, but as Chicago has no Sunday theater law, there is a performance every night. In addition, there are concerts by the Chicago Orchestra on Thursday and Sunday afternoons.

Compensation

Love laid his kisses on my lips,
  His dreams upon my day.
Then, swifter than the swallow dips
  He flew far, far away.

Yet, though he never should return,
  And I alone must pine,
His kisses on my lips still burn,
  His dreams are always mine!

ELEANOR HOYT PLANS WEDDING ON CAPE

In Mayfair
-with-
May Christie

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 12—The Meadow Club was the most popular spot here, with the exciting finals of the tennis and its gay dance.

It's a very pretty place, the low, rambling clubhouse being surrounded by numerous tennis courts, lawns and charming flower gardens.

MAY CHRISTIE

Between sets...and they were hard-fought and drawn-out...I wandered with a friend down the tiled path at the back of the building, where bushes of hydrangeas bloomed in a blue loveliness and there were beds of pink dahlias and asters, and gladioli and marigolds.

A rustic bridge beyond the hedge of rambler roses crosses a wide creek, or inlet of the sea. Beyond is an ivy-covered cottage. The whole effect is rural and lovely.

Wear Sports Dresses

The popular Mr. Jarvis Geer, of the handsome looks and flashing smile, was watching the tennis finals intently. He comes of an old New York family and lives on Upper Park ave.

The genial Mr. Albert Pease of East 64th st. was another absorbed spectator. A friend of his told me on Saturday afternoon that it was he who put over the sale of the site of the old Waldorf-Astoria to the Empire State Building people.

The women spectators at the tennis finals wore simple but smart sports dresses, the predominating shade being yellow.

Pale blue was a close runner-up...and plenty of white crepe was worn.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stafford were among the best-known people present. She is vivacious and extremely good looking; they entertain a great deal down here.

Picks Winner

I saw Mr. and Mrs. Louis de L'Aigle Munds, of "Mayfair Cottage," Pond Lane . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles Van Vleck, Jr., of "Ballyshear" . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles Merrill, of that beautiful house, "The Orchard" . . . Miss Jeanne Meagher . . . Elizabeth Chew . . . Mr. and Mrs. Justin O'Brien . . . and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Crawley.

Wasn't it an extraordinary thing that Mrs. Adrienne Peabody, the numerologist, who has made such a hit with all the ladies in the Hamptons this season, should—out of a clear sky, and with no knowledge whatever of tennis—predict that George Lott would be winner of the tournament? . . . "I worked it out from his name and the date of his birth," she informed me last Friday with much confidence . . . 24 hours before he won!

With all those brilliant players competing, it was rather uncanny how she picked the champion . . .!

She told me that Pythagoras . . . the ancient Greek mathematician who had a school in the Delphi Temple, Greece . . . was the founder of the science of numerology.

Leap for Life

At the suggestion of that popular resident of Southampton, Mr. James Lawrence Breese, of "Breese In Cottage," I went over from the Meadow Club with friends to view Dr. Arnold Genthe's wonderful exhibition of photographs and portraits at "Four Fountains" . . . which is the studio built by Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Hamilton Tyng in the grounds of their home, "The Swallows."

Their former house on that site was burned down last year. Mrs. Tyng told me how she had to jump for her life from a balcony on an upper floor when the place was afire.

The new house is built in modernistic style. It has what looks like a darling little penthouse with a wide roof-garden perched on top . . .

But to return to the exhibition of pictures in her studio.

Mrs. Tyng, Mr. Breese and I gazed long at scenes of contemporary Greek life . . . the monasteries of Mount Athos . . . misty studies of the Parthenon . . . of shepherds on Mount Parnassus . . . of Corfu and the Greek islands . . . and splendid heads of ancient priests and monks.

Dr. Genthe is a great traveler, and his books are illustrated by his photographs.

Mrs. Lucien Hamilton Tyng paints delightfully in water-color. A pale blue room in her studio is full of her pictures, painted, she told me, in China . . . Egypt . . . Palestine . . . Morocco.

She introduced me to Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Terry, of "Swallow Ridge."

Also to an interesting artist, Mrs. J. Scott Hartley, who can tell fortunes with tea leaves!

Radio in Auto

Driving back along the maple-shaded roads with Mr. Breese, I was amazed to hear a sudden sweet singing from apparently nowhere!

That voice was very close and clear.

It proved to be a radio attached to the steering wheel of Mr. Breese's car!

He has a charming place down here . . . entirely unique of its kind . . . but of that I will tell you tomorrow.

Let us get back to that seat of merrymaking, the Meadow Club, last Saturday evening.

The scene resembled those fairy-like ones you sometimes see in the movies . . .!

Flood-lights turned the exquisite flower-gardens and the big clumps of hydrangeas all about the club into an ethereal picture.

This was enhanced by festoons of many-colored lights slung everywhere and hundreds of balloons floating here, hither and yonder.

There were pretty women and girls galore, looking like radiant flowers, too . . .

• • •

Plenty of young men . . . and those not so young . . . bent on enjoyment.

Several hundred people were present the night of the finals at the Meadow Club.

The largest dinner-party was given by Mr. and Mrs. John W. Stafford, of "To Windward" in Gin Lane . . . and isn't that a quaint name for their home? They had at least thirty guests . . . among the men I saw Percy Melville, Harry Evans, Mr. Oliver Gardner and Mr. Frank Kotteck.

Mr. and Mrs. Orson Munn were in that party, too . . . Mr. and Mrs. William M. Fleitmann, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pitou, of Moorlands, were also entertaining at dinner.

• • •

Many Dinner Parties

Dr. and Mrs. Fenton Taylor, of Sideways, Halsey lane, were among their many guests, so were Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Maguire (she was Ruth Swift, of Three Chimneys . . . and Mr. and Mrs. William Maguire.

Mr. and Mrs. Garner L. Gilsey had a party including Mr. and Mrs. Robert McKean Thomas.

I saw Maureen Virginia Smith, whose parents have a charming place down here, entertain a large party of young people.

The popular Doris Morrill (whose parents own The Orchard I spoke about before) had several guests at the ball. Among the young men at her table were Clifford Michele . . . Carleton Granberry, Jr., . . . Donald Stewart . . . and J. Foster Blakeley.

The party continued late . . . Although we had all spent the entire day in the open, no one grew sleepy . . . it was all too thrilling!

Society Notes

Seen at the Junior League for luncheon were Miss Catherine Hedge, Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell (Mary Francis Oakes), Mrs. Whiting Willauer (Louise Russell) and Miss Eleanor Frothingham. All but one of this charming group seem to have something on which to be congratulated.

Miss Hedge's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hedge of Brookline, have just announced her engagement to Mr. Jack Hammond of Chestnut Hill. The date for the wedding has not been decided upon as yet, but will probably take place in the late fall or next spring. Miss Hedge made her debut during the season of 1927-28, at a dance at The Country Club. She has been spending the summer at her parents' home in Plymouth.

Mrs. Willauer is to be congratulated on the quite recent birth of a son. She and her husband make their home in Cambridge.

And Miss Frothingham's engagement is, by this time, not quite such a novelty, having been announced two or three weeks ago by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Frothingham of Beacon Hill and Marion, to Mr. Austen Smith of Cambridge. He is the son of Mrs. William Austen Smith of Park ave., New York, and the late Rev. Mr. Smith.

Miss Frothingham made her debut in the season of 1926, at a dance at the Chilton Club. She is a senior at Radcliffe, and has been spending the summer at the Harvard Summer school, studying geology. Her fiance was graduated from Harvard with the class of '29, and is a member of the Speakers and Phoenix Clubs. The date for their wedding has not been decided on, but it will probably take place in late October or November.

POPULAR ON NORTH SHORE

MISS EMILY CONANT snapped with Mr. Kenneth Brown at Marblehead. Miss Conant is the charming sub-debutante daughter of the Augustine B. Conants of Brookline and Marblehead.

Miss Hoyt to Wed on Cape

It was somewhat of a surprise though a pleasant one, to learn that Miss Eleanor Hoyt has decided on Friday, Aug. 28, for her marriage to Mr. Alexis Felix du Pont, Jr. A surprise because it was thought that this interesting affair would not take place until fall. Miss Hoyt, known intimately as "Ellie," is the charming and versatile daughter of Mrs. Katherine Stone Hoyt and Mr. Richard Farnsworth Hoyt of New York. Just after their divorce this spring, Mr. Hoyt was married to Mrs. Nelson Doubleday, former wife of the well known publisher, also of New York.

Miss Ellie's wedding will take place at the beautiful summer home of her parents, The Anchorage, in Marion.

Mr. du Pont is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexis Felix du Pont of Wilmington and Wianno, and will probably take his bride on a flying wedding trip.

Many Fetes at Deauville

By BARON GEORGE WRANGEL.

Deauville, Aug. 12—With the season rapidly approaching its climax, the fashionable set around here are kept on the run from 11 o'clock one morning until three or four o'clock the next.

In the daylight hours the Bar Du Soleil continues crowded to capacity. Seen there was Madame Dumba with Ralph Beaver Strassburger of Philadelphia. Madame Dumba's husband was the Austro-Hungarian ambassador at Washington until the outbreak of the war, and she was popular in society then. She wore a white wash silk dress with a beige and white belted coat, and a rust colored hat, bag and necklace.

Seen at the casino was Princess Ilynska, wife of Grand Duke Dmitri. The former Audrey Emery of New York, was in a smart blue costume with one of the new shaped hats, which suited her admirably.

Man About Town

By AL DUFFY

FIRST NIGHT

Gee, but it was good to go into a theater and see a regular show again... We've been without 'em so long that we were all hungry to see one... That's why everyone put on their best bib and tucker and turned out for the premier of Schwab and Mandel's "Free For All" at the Colonial, Monday night.

Of course, a lot of the regular "first nighters" were missing—we missed Frank Hatch and Katherine Lyons and Herman Bletzer and Philip Hale and H. T. P., just to mention a few—but their places were taken by others, and we couldn't really blame them for being unwilling to shorten their vacations and get back to town for the opening.

New York sent a pretty representative delegation to the opening, though . . . For instance, we saw J. Harold Murray, who used to be Harry Rulten of Winthrop before he became a singing star in "Rio Rita" . . . . Murray is under contract to Schwab and Mandel to appear in the new operetta that is on their fall production schedule . . . Murray was with his manager, Leo Fitzgerald . . . Then, we saw Henry Spitzer and Max Dreyfuss from the Harms music publishing office . . . They've got the score of the show and they should be happy for there are at least two big numbers in the show . . . . Of course, Charlie Goldberg, who keeps the Harms banner waving locally, was on hand with his bosses.

Jim Peede from the Shubert office gave the show the once-over and we saw Billy Grady, one of New York's better known theatrical agents, greeting friends between the acts . . . Billy has been recovering from an illness up in New Hampshire for the past few weeks, but he had to come down and see "Free For All"... Tommy Bodkin, theatrical manager and one of the closest pals of the late Jack Donahue, was also curious enough to wash his face, shave, put on his city clothes and come down from New Hampshire for the opening.

Between the acts we were hard at work picking out celebrities when we suddenly looked up and there, standing in front of us, was Zella Russell with a coat of Revere tan that made her look more beautiful than ever . . . We put our foot in it right at the start, of course, by greeting her with, "Zella! You're looking great. You've put on weight, haven't you?" . . . But Zella is big-hearted enough to forgive that and she took us by the hand and trotted us over to where her husband, Harry K. Morton, was talking with J. Harold Murray . . . Harry and Zella were here last year with "Street Singer" and, since the show closed, they have been summering at their place in Revere.

We were all making so much noise, with everybody trying to talk at once, that Paul (Brookline) McCullough, of Clark and McCullough, came over to add his share to the reunion . . . Flo McFadden (Mrs. Jack Haley) stood over in another corner of the lobby with some friends and from her smile it was apparent that she thought her hubby was doing a good job . . . And we saw Russ Brown's former wife—can't remember her name—in the crowded lobby, too.

We could go on and on telling you about the crowd but we'll simply let it go by listing here some of the others we saw.

There was Elinor (Herald movie critic) Hughes with Rebekah Hobbs, managing director of the Professional Players; Anne (Theatre Guild) Ford with her sister, Margaret and Harry Bostonherald) Siegal; City Censor John Casey with his pal, Judge Day, Helen (Bostontraveler) Eager and Horace Heidt, Len Libbie of "Variety," Nick (Bostonamerican) Young and Mrs. Young, Leo (Sundayadvertiser) Gaffney and Mrs. Gaffney, Bill (Bostonherald) Greenough and Mrs. Greenough, E. H. (Bostonpost) Crosby and Mrs. Crosby, Charles (Bostonglobe) Howard, Eddie (Dailyrecord) Harkins and E. W. (Herald-Traveler publisher) Preston, who liked the show so well that we saw him buying tickets for later performances during the intermission.

Then, there was former Attorney-General Leon R. Eyges, Fight Promoter Eddie Mack, Emile (Westminster Hotel) Coulon, with Mickey ("Himself") Alpert, Dr. Bill Cleary, Joe DiPesa, Tom (Colonial) Lothian, Jay Dillon of Dillon and Parker, John ("Follow Thru") Philbrick and Mrs. Philbrick, Frank Corbett of Shepard, Corbett and Donovan, Mrs. Fred Wright, Peter (Daily record) Kelley and Mrs. Kelley, Judge Bill McDonald, Judge Edward A. Counihan, Selma Laskey and her husband-to-be, Lou Gordon, Charlie (Schwab and Mandel) Hertzman, Finley Peter Dunne, Jr., late of the N. Y. World and now press agent for S. and M., and, of course, Larry Schwab and Frank Mandel themselves, not to forget Bobby Connolly . . . Frank Mandel spent the evening pacing up and down, (He must have walked at least 10 miles during the three hours) the back of the theater, while Larry Schwab groped his way up the darkened aisle every few minutes to dispatch a message backstage . . . And through it all the rotund Bobby Connolly leaned against the back rail and kept time with the music with a tapping finger.

THE LOVES OF CHARLIE CHAPLIN

King of Laughs and World's Unluckiest Lover

(Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American)

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

(Charlie Chaplin's life has been so blighted by romance that his friends consider him a glutton for punishment. He has hunted and searched for romance in all four corners of the globe. The happiness he has had has always been transitory. Mildred Harris' love snapped in Charlie's heart.)

CHAPTER 9

The ordinary rules than bind ordinary husbands to the marital yoke, Mildred tried to exercise on Charlie—without avail.

Charlie was a genius. He couldn't be made to punch the domestic time-clock. And yet his young wife felt that he should.

She wanted him home on regular schedule—a demand foreign to the artistic nature of the comedian.

"I must be alone," he said often to his wife.

And Mildred thought her husband was shutting himself off from her with a barrier invisible and brutal.

Their marriage was a tragedy of two mismates; of two lives incompatible in outlook and attitude.

There could never be mental companionship between the two. They didn't express their thoughts in the same language.

Mildred had the conception of marriage as had many other young brides. She dreamed of a home and entertainment, of friends and exchange visiting. Charlie thought nothing of this.

He wanted companionship of a kind Mildred knew nothing about.

Mildred wanted to talk about her house and its furnishings, of the cook and her mistakes. Charlie sometimes would be amused by the narration. At other times he simply didn't listen and looked off into space.

In these moods he was a complete enigma to his wife.

When in the middle of the night Charlie, driven by his restless spirit, would leave the house and wander off in the dark by himself Mildred would lie awake crying because her husband had left her alone.

Lavish display of enjoyment and whoopee expression of fun were simply not in Charlie's scheme of things.

Charlie spent loads of money on his home and its upkeep, but he wouldn't squander his earnings on inconsequentials.

LIBERAL WITH HER

Mildred again mistook this economy for penuriousness. And yet, Charlie was liberal with her. His wife had accounts in all the leading stores in Los Angeles and bought whatever and whenever she needed things. She always was mistress of a house which employed four and five servants.

Mildred had no fixed allowance. Charlie gave her all the money she wanted and needed.

But the amusement and companionship she craved, she was denied.

Charlie's chosen form of amusement was to gather around him in his artistically fitted home a little group of friends. They were people whom he liked, not because of wealth, social position or gayety, but for companionship and simply because he liked them.

With them he would engage in intellectual discussion on topics of the moment. He would discuss books and philosophy. Charlie was concerned about the motivating forces of life and people. He liked to exchange his views with others.

In these conversations, Mildred sat by her husband and listened, but she wasn't an interested listener.

She felt herself outside the group. She felt strange and lonely in the gathering.

Very few women came into that intimate circle. Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks were Charlie's two intimate acquaintances. With them he enjoyed sociability.

PRIZED SYMPATHY

They were frequent visitors at Chaplin's home.

Mildred once said that Charlie confided his belief to her that "a woman's sympathy is worth more than all the brains in the world, and that he would run a mile sooner than be associated with a girl whose brain was bigger than her heart."

Yet Charlie's closest friends belie that statement.

A man who has been associated with Charlie for 16 years told me a few weeks ago that Charlie is especially fond of intelligent and clever girls.

"Charlie these years enjoys smart repartee with his women friends," he said. He is bored by silly prattle of beautiful, but dumb, women."

Mildred knew that, compared to Charlie, she was mentally tiny. She has said so. She has, under her own signature, told that she would read the books Charlie suggested to her, that she tried to reach academic heights comparable with his.

That she wanted to be able to talk about books, pictures, music and poetry with Charlie. She knew that if she could she stood a better chance of holding him.

Music was particularly dear to Charlie's heart. Next to his work, books, pictures and his violin were his real and lasting resources.

Charlie had a library crowded with all sorts of books that he read and knew familiarly.

He gossiped about books for hours with John Barrymore.

PEEVED HIS WIFE

Charlie hated bores. Most people bored him. Charlie was indifferent to the impression he made in casual meeting with others.

All this peeved his young wife.

A thoroughly social person, she wanted her husband to act the same way.

Mildred, when she married Charlie, thought that her friends would come to be Charlie's friends. She pictured herself entertaining them in her new home. But before many months of marriage with the film genius had passed she became aware of the impossibility of this.

Charlie's idea of friendship was one of concetration on those particularly favored.

Charlie simply didn't care for Mildred's friends and he never took the trouble to even conceal his disinterest in them.

He hadn't married Mildred's friends. He didn't even have to bother with them.

Mildred continued to be annoyed and troubled. She continued to take offense at Charlie's frankness and obviously expressed dislike of people.

JEALOUS OF HER

She resented her husband's naive snubbing of her friends.

Mildred even misunderstood Charlie's desire to have her all to himself. He was jealous of her. But to Mildred, his jealousy was insufficient proof of his love.

The question of another woman never entered their lives together. But Mildred was dissatisfied with her marriage.

That he showered her with the luxuries of life; that he gave her all of himself,shed idn't appreciate.

Mildred couldn't penetrate his soul. She couldn't possess him body and soul.

And like a woman, she sulked and acted as the child that she was.

Mildred insisted that her husband was a strange, brooding spirit, haunted by good and perhaps, sometimes, bad impulses of temptations, inspirations and fears, all pulling in different ways and giving him no rest.

Charlie's wife sold herself the idea that "Charlie's one true love in life is his art."

She harped on the thought. She hounded Chaplin with the thought.

Charlie's marriage began to drift into disillusionment.

More of the Chaplin-Harris romance will be told tomorrow.

COCKROACHES

RATTLESNAKES

Cockroaches carry germs of disease and filth from cellars and sewers to the pantry shelves and food containers.

NOW IS THE TIME TO GET RID OF THEM

Liquids will kill only about 10%. Poison powders will do about the same.

There is only one sure and safe way to entirely rid the house of these pests. Roaches are night feeding bugs. They don't appear until late and then the entire family turns out for its daily meal. Feed them something they like better than ordinary food, something that is non-poisonous and does not drive them back into the walls.

Of course you can tell the difference • they're FRESH!

What a world of difference there is between the mild, cool fragrance of Camels in the Humidor Pack and the unkindly hot smoke of an ordinary cigarette!

Your own throat will bear grateful witness to this.

If you have the slightest doubt about it, or about the importance of perfectly conditioned tobaccos in true smoking pleasure, just make this simple test:

First, inhale the smooth cool smoke of a factory-fresh Camel and note how throat-friendly it is; next, inhale the hot smoke of a parched dry cigarette and feel that scratch-and-sting on the membrane.

All the rare flavor and aroma of the fine Turkish and mild Domestic tobaccos of which Camels are blended is kept intact and prime for you by the Humidor Pack.

This scientific germ-safe wrapping—not plain ordinary Cellophane, but moisture-proof Cellophane which costs nearly twice as much—seals in all the natural freshness, seals it so tightly that wet weather cannot make Camels damp, nor drought weather make them dry.

Try Camels, just to see what a happy difference freshness makes in a cigarette.

Do your throat a favor, try them for just one day; then quit them—if you can.

● Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack not only keeps your cigarettes safe from your wet bathing suit but also keeps the sand and dust out as well

GANDHI'S REJECTION OF FANATICAL AMERICAN CONVERTS APPLAUDED

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

ROBERT E. ROGERS

IT IS REFRESHING to note that Gandhi is discouraging the "many Americans who have written to him, seeking to join his model colony at Ahmedabad and to practice his principles of self-denial, prayer and service for others." In no case, we are told, has he encouraged them to come. He reminds them that the climate is terrible, the life harder and more austere than they probably imagine. He says the rule of the colony is merely to enable each one to make the greatest progress in the faith of his own forefathers. This last looks like a hint that the would-be disciple can make quite as much progress in Hoboken, New Jersey (where one candidate lived), as in Hindu, India.

What is not so refreshing is to learn that so many Americans would like to cast their lot with him in his model colony. But it is not so surprising, either. There is something in the American blood that goes crazy over new Messiahs and new cults. The less American they are and the further away they seem, the better. Our history is cluttered up with the records of little cults and experiments of one sort and another, economic, social, religious, political, which attracted their adherents briefly, flourished like the green bay tree, and collapsed.

Where Many Ventures Failed

The old-style history used to speak of our first immigrants as pioneers of the noblest purposes, the chosen of God, who came from a festering Europe to build a new Jerusalem in the New Canaan. The later school of historians, such as James Truslow Adams, implies that most of our earliest settlers came because they couldn't make a living in Europe; in other words, that America got only the failures and ne'er-do-wells. There is probably more truth in that than we like to think, those of us who are of the old stock, but surely the older point of view is true also.

The old American stock had a strain of fanatic idealism in it, which most often petered out in fantastic enterprises founded upon the notions of cranks. The 1840s and 1850s saw many an enterprise intended to make over the world: Brook Farm in West Roxbury, the New Harmony in Ohio, the free love communist colony in Oneida, N. Y., which became by slow stages the Community Silver Company; the large Fourier phalanstery in Texas, which went all to pot, and many others—including the Mormon experiment, which succeeded.

Yet the same spirit that failed at Brook Farm initiated the anti-slavery and the temperance movement. The spirit packed a punch under proper circumstances. Yet it undeniably had a flair for the novel and untried, for the Utopian and fanciful. It loved sensational novelties in religion, as our large number of "invented" sects can testify. Many were born and died, but many more, just as palpably absurd to reason, have large enrollments, great prosperity and considerable power.

* * *

Missionaries a Harm?

Along with this itch for the New Jerusalem our old American stock always had a hankering for the far away east, for the salvation of the Orient. Ever since the famous hay-stack prayer meeting at Williams College over a century ago, our American churches of all denominations have poured prayer and effort, money and missionaries into the sunrise lands, and are finding now, greatly to their spiritual upset, that some of the most influential leaders in India and China feel that the whole missionary movement may have done more harm than good.

In the old days it was always the Foreign Missionary Society in our churches that skimmed the cream off the collection plate, while the Home Missionary Society was starving to death. Yet out of Home Missions came eventually our whole system of social service and organized philanthropy.

As the old stock moved West it took its habits with it. Where once our New England Yankees dreamed at Brook Farm, or became Millerites and looked forward to the judgment day, now their descendants, who have left the prairies behind them and moved to the Coast, are notorious for promoting the most varied assortments of fancy religions in the world. Los Angeles is full of swamis and gurus, of sun worshippers and bahaists, and of all varieties of the Oriental yearning for the immediate god.

It is in our Puritan, covenanter, come-outer blood, or in one branch of it. Van Wyck Brooks said once that everybody in America followed one or two prototypes, Jonathan Edwards or Benjamin Franklin. The one was the most extreme of the Utopian idealists of Calvinism, who lived in a world of pure reason and pure faith; the other was an equally pure pragmatist, who had little or no religious sense and who measured the value of everything by its practicability.

Too Many Gandhi Fanatics

The sons of Ben have made us the most prosperous and comfortable and progressive people in the world. The sons of Jonathan have for more than a century tormented us with dreams impossible of fulfillment. When occasionally by some miracle one of them gets itself fulfilled, our latter state is liable to be worse than our former. Fragments of Utopia imbedded in a workaday society are like salt in a wound. We would be better off without it.

There are probably many good people in this country who are crazy either to go out to Gandhi or to get Gandhi here to America to set up a shrine. Whether Gandhi's message has any applicability to any but his own tormented land never occurs to them. Whether such a life as he lives is possible, or even desirable, for an American in the third decade of the 20th century they never consider. It suffices them that Gandhi and India are strange and far off, that Gandhi's teachings have a pleasing and novel ring to them after a lifetime of struggling unsuccessfully to put into practice our own traditional ethics, that it would be fun to drink goats' milk and go wrapped in cheesecloth like somebody in a pageant—and that, somehow, all this would be better for the soul than sticking on the job at home, wearing regular clothes and eating regular food, and doing the thing nearest at hand that needs to be done.

Gandhi is perfectly right in refusing to allow these cuckoo candidates over there to mess up his work. Not merely does charity begin at home, he knows, but home is also the place where most crying needs are to be met, the dirtiest work to be done. Is America yet perfect?

Cambridge Youths Seized on Their First Bandit Job

DID HERO DIE THAT THEY MIGHT HUNGER?

THE WORLD FORGETS

The family of "Mickey" Perkins, outstanding hero of the Yankee Division in the war, are in destitute circumstances and living in a small apartment solely on the $57 monthly "compensation" for his brave deeds. His father, Michael J. Perkins, Sr., 68, shown here, lost his job with the State department of public works two years ago.

MEMENTOS ONLY OF VALOROUS DEEDS

Of course, Michael Perkins did not perform his heroic acts that his family might suffer. His feats of heroism were performed that "the world might be a safe place in which his family could live." And now the world forgets the medals it bestowed, held here by his sister Grace, 13, and allows her and the rest of the family to be in need. (Staff photos.)

Rain Keeps Dad of Hero Perkins Idle

The government that claimed the life of his hero son in war was forced to say "no" to the father of "Mickey" Perkins, Yankee Division hero, when the 68-year-old man sought work at the Army Base.

Perkins and a brother of the hero and his two sisters were revealed in dire need yesterday in an appeal to Gov. Ely by State Senator James J. Twohig.

They live in a tiny four-room tenement at [illegible] Silver st., South Boston.

Oddly enough, the rain that he trudged through in search of work was the cause of him not obtaining it.

Customs officials turned Perkins and 23 other men away because "weighing of government stores at the Army Base could not take place in the rain."

Six medals for heroism including the posthumous Congressional Medal of Honor repose in a drawer at the humble Perkins home, but the family larder is bare, they reported today.

The government insurance payment of $57 a month, the compensation on the life of his son, is not enough to defray expenses for himself and family, Perkins said.

The son John, 23, has been as unsuccessful as the father in obtaining work.

Helen, 19, must keep house and Grace, 13, is too young to work.

Partly incapacitated by blindness in his right eye the elder Perkins appealed to Twohig for employment as a laborer for the state.

He lost the eye 33 years ago as a railroad worker when a piece of steel hit the eye. Lately he has been obtaining a day's work about every two or three weeks in extra labor for government weighers.

But it rained today.

18 IN CRASH OF BOSTON BUS

Eighteen passengers in a Greyhound line bus from Boston to New York escaped injury today when the vehicle swerved off the highway and plunged through a fence, stopping within a foot of a large residence after colliding with a milk truck.

Fred Larson of [illegible], the driver of the bus, told police he was blinded by the lights of the milk truck as the bus was rounding a long curve near St. Mary's cemetery. Damage was slight.

Roxbury Girl Held on Check Charges

Miss Marjorie Waldeck, 21, blonde Roxbury girl, was held for hearing in municipal court today after she was charged by officers of several department stores with nine counts of larceny by bad checks.

Judge Adlow set her bail at $1000 and Aug. 19 for her hearing.

Curley Has Life Pass to the Giants' Games

Mayor Curley today received from officials of the New York Giants a pass which permits him to attend all games of that team played in New York during the remainder of his life.

The pass is a beautiful sterling silver affair two inches long and one and a half inches wide. The figures of three elderly men seated on a park bench adorn the pass and surmounting the trio are the words, "Fanned Out."

Attorney Defaults in Communist Case

Thomas G. Connolly, Quincy attorney, arrested with a group of alleged Communists in a demonstration on Boston Common two weeks ago, today defaulted an appearance in court to answer a charge of speaking without a permit.

According to associates in his Boston office the lawyer is absent in New York on business. The others arrested in the case were sent to jail after they refused to pay fines.

COURAGE FAILED AFTER TWO HOLDUPS

Caught After a Long Chase; Confess Robbing Places in Arlington, Cambridge

Pictures on Page 1

The first day of crime of three Cambridge youths, starting early this morning, ended ignominiously three hours later with all three in cells in Boston police headquarters.

In full confessions, according to Deputy Supt. James McDevitt, they admitted robbing an Arlington garage and a Cambridge diner, getting a total of $100.

They were captured by the Boston flying squadron in the Back Bay after a long chase through the South End and Brighton.

The youths gave their names as William McGrath, 18, of Appleton st., Michael Gallo, 23, of Concord ave. and Paul Charlton, 17, of [illegible] st., all of Cambridge.

"It was our first attempt; we were after spending money and it seemed pretty easy till they caught us," McGrath was quoted as saying by the police.

Acting on Commissioner Hultman's recent order, police are checking to ascertain if Gallo is an alien. He is reported to have entered the country when two years old.

Warrants charging all three with armed robbery were obtained by Cambridge police in district court. McGrath and Gallo are also charged with carrying guns.

VIEWED BY VICTIMS

Skeptical of their insistence that it was their first try at robbery, police had victims of several recent holdups view them, but none identified them.

William A. Somers, Jr., night manager of the Menotomy [illegible] in Massachusetts ave., near Mt. Vernon st., Arlington, [illegible] the police identified Gallo and McGrath as youths who robbed his place of $20 at [illegible] this morning.

The other place held up was a diner at 210 Main st., where [illegible] got $60.

They come of respectable families, police said, and McGrath's father, a Cambridge fireman, [illegible] heroically in a fire in Central sq. last February.

GUNS FOUND IN CAR

They were captured by Special Officers Daniel McDonald and Hans [illegible] of the Boston police in Bay State rd.

Two automatic pistols and [illegible] rounds of ammunition were found in the car and the youths had approximately $[illegible] between them. Joseph Genest, Hurley st., Cambridge, told police later he lent them the auto last night when Gallo said they were going to a wake.

"I never got in trouble before except on the night before the Fourth when I was drunk," said McGrath, according to the police. "We made our plans yesterday and looked over several places, finally deciding on the garage in Arlington.

"I got a gun which had been in the house for years and one of the other fellows got another. We went up there early this morning and two of us went in and asked for some water for our radiator.

"When the manager started to get it for us, we pulled our guns and looted the cash drawer getting about $20. We then ran got in the car and decided to drive back to Cambridge.

"But it had been so easy we decided to try again and went to the diner, where we got about $80. We divided the money going over Harvard bridge, and we made our mistake coming into Boston, but we intended to rob a Chinese laundry on Shawmut ave., only our courage oozed as we got there. That's where the police got on our trail."

Purse Robbed

TWO TRAPPED IN CHECK 'RACKET'

Arrested in connection with police investigation of a bad check "racket," in which checks for several thousand dollars were stolen from the Boston Clearing House, two Revere men pleaded not guilty today in Lynn court and were held in [illegible] bail each.

The men are Abraham Ostraw, who was arrested at the Manufacturers National Bank in Lynn, and Abraham Miller, who was arrested [illegible].

[illegible]

Ostraw is alleged to have deposited a check for $[illegible] and another for $83, both stolen from the clearing house. Police say the game was to make small withdrawals against these checks from time to time. He was making a withdrawal when arrested, [illegible].

Atty. Edward Voke of Chelsea, counsel for the two men, told Judge Edward J. O'Brien that while he had not gone into the case thoroughly, he understood the checks were received in payment for merchandise.

Police quoted Ostraw as saying that he had been engaged in [illegible] being put over to Aug. 18 on request of Voke.

QUINCY BATHERS SUFFER BOILS

An epidemic of boils in the Adams Shore section of Quincy started an investigation of Adams Shore beach by Quincy health [illegible].

More than a score of persons have complained of the infection after they bathed at the beach.

The board's interest was aroused on a complaint by the Adams Shore Improvement Association, whose members have been receiving complaints.

The association will hold a meeting a week from tonight to which Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, Health Commissioner Cornelius J. Lynch and Alfred L. LaBreque, president of the city council, have been invited.

$5000 FUND TO PRESS FIGHT ON PARALYSIS

Governor Takes Money From the Emergency Sum as 21 New Cases Are Reported

Governor Ely today apportioned $5000 from emergency funds to the State Department of Public Health for fighting the spread of infantile paralysis.

As he was doing so 21 new cases were being reported by the department, covering the past 24 hours.

Five deaths were also reported, four of them in Boston, but according to Boston health officials, these all occurred last week and were previously announced at City Hall.

"This part of the country is being visited by an increase in infantile paralysis cases after several low years," the Governor stated.

CAUTION IS URGED

"As the disease is spread by contacts, all that can at present be advised in control of its spread is that parents should reduce to a minimum the contacts of their children with others.

"In regard to the cases themselves, much can be done through early recognition, and apparently through prompt use of blood serum from persons who previously had the disease.

"Through the Infantile Paralysis Commission of Harvard University diagnostic service is offered to all children, serum is provided and facilities are available for skilled after-care."

"In order that the State Department of Public Health may co-operate to the fullest extent with the other agencies in collecting and preparing serum, and may in part meet the demand of expansion put upon it by the increased incidence of the disease, I will apportion $5000 from my emergency funds for these purposes."

The total number of cases reported in Massachusetts this month is 116.

CLINICS ARE OPENED

A clinic for collection of blood from former sufferers for serum was opened today in Haverhill and another will be held in Fall River Friday. More volunteers are wanted [illegible].

The 21 new cases reported today were from Pittsfield, 4; Boston, 3; [illegible], and one each from [illegible], Brockton, Fall River, New Bedford, Stoughton, Brookline, Malden, Newton, Leominster, Worcester, Longmeadow and Great Barrington.

73 New Cases of Paralysis in N. Y.

New York, Aug. 12 (AP) Seventy-three new cases of infantile paralysis [illegible]. The total since [illegible] were reported today to the New York city health department.

COURT ALMOST A PAWNSHOP

East Boston court was threatened for a time today with a three-[illegible] a kindly [illegible] the judge came to the rescue.

It started with the arrival of William Schneider, East Boston youth, who had owed the court $5 for an auto violation since July 30.

Schneider put down a $2 bill and then stripped three rings from his fingers and asked Court Clerk Dennis Kelliher to accept them as security for ten days.

"Keep your rings, son, and I'll speak to the court for more time," Kelliher told him.

The ten days was granted without the security and the $2 was credited to Schneider's account.

LAWYERS, RACKETEERS FACE INDICTMENT

DAILY TRUE STORY

TRAILED

JED'S TRAIL WAS EASY TO FOLLOW

ASK JED BURNETT where the biggest bucks roam among the [illegible]. Ask Jed where the finest trout leap along the [illegible] reaches of the [illegible] river and its tributary streams.

You [illegible] but it was a foregone conclusion [illegible] any of the knowledge gained from [illegible] years of tramping the [illegible] about Mendocino. A secretive [illegible] was Jed.

So secretive in fact that there were some persons particularly anxious to learn Jed's hidden haunts. The game warden [illegible]. It was common knowledge among the old-timers [illegible] country, that Jed never troubled himself about securing such a thing as a hunting or fishing license. Not, at least, during Bill White's 10 years on the job.

[illegible]

The season had been open a week when Jed [illegible] into [illegible] road [illegible] the bank of the [illegible].

Another Car Followed

Bill White Was Stern-Faced

[illegible] followed [illegible] Bill White [illegible] ten years [illegible] were [illegible] complete [illegible].

[illegible]

But [illegible] stopped [illegible] protected [illegible] redwood.

The warden [illegible] that [illegible] escape [illegible] Jed had had [illegible] road. Bill White [illegible].

Jed's [illegible]

[illegible] into a [illegible] ferns [illegible] there [illegible] steps [illegible] down [illegible] fully unaware [illegible]. On each of these [illegible] the warden [illegible]. There was no need [illegible] himself [illegible] or later Jed would [illegible].

Halfway down the canyon he saw Jed [illegible] behind [illegible] Bill White [illegible] buck [illegible] panel [illegible] sniffing [illegible] air.

Jed's [illegible] shoulder [illegible] buck [illegible] forward then [illegible]. Jed ran [illegible] ing over the [illegible] shop [illegible].

"Nice buck you've got there, Jed," said [illegible].

Jed looked up [illegible].

"Yep. Pretty good one, Bill," he responded [illegible] warden. "Didn't know you were hereabouts."

"One of the biggest I've seen in some time," [illegible] warden [illegible] Jed [illegible].

Jed [illegible]. "About a hundred and thirty, perhaps. Expected better this time of season."

"All the same it's mighty good," Bill White [illegible] warden [illegible] the case [illegible] trapped [illegible].

"Not bad," Jed admitted reluctantly.

"No, not half bad," said the warden. "By the way, Jed, I suppose you've got your license with you?" [illegible].

"Why, sure!" came the surprising reply, as Jed reached into a pocket.

"Better let me have a look," the warden directed.

"Sure," repeated Jed. One after another he ransacked his pockets, his smile of assurance turning to seeming dismay. Meanwhile Bill White stood grinning at the other's discomfiture.

"Guess I must have lost it," Jed admitted the fruitlessness of his search. "Had it when I left town, but—"

"That's an old story, Jed," the warden told him. "They all tell that one. I've been waiting a long time to catch you like this, Jed, and now I've got you. Guess you better come along back to town with me. Pick up that buck and we'll get going."

[illegible] Don't [illegible] from the warden to the buck [illegible] back to the warden.

"It's the evidence in the case," the warden [illegible].

"Pick it up and [illegible]"

"And you want me to pack back [illegible] against myself?" [illegible].

"[illegible] Why not?"

"In that case," Jed told him [illegible], "I guess you better pick it up yourself. I'm not packing back any evidence against myself! Not me!"

The warden grunted, cleared [illegible] grunted again. He knew Jed had him there. There is no [illegible] law about [illegible] carrying evidence to [illegible] himself. If Bill White wanted the evidence he'd have to [illegible] himself. Jed was within his rights. This much the warden [illegible] as with a final [illegible] the [illegible] on his own shoulder [illegible] to where the [illegible].

It was [illegible] among the [illegible] when they started. But the weight of the buck made that trail seem [illegible] to Bill White. [illegible] penetrate [illegible] through the trees [illegible] stifled him, branches plucked at the spread antlers. A thing of torture that five-mile trail.

Surprised Warden

Jed Produces License

At [illegible]

[illegible] One hand [illegible] the other withdrew a [illegible] paper.

[illegible] had that [illegible] warden [illegible]

Jed Burnett had [illegible] carrying that buck [illegible] weary miles. He was thinking of that long five-mile trek up hill and down hill, with that hundred and thirty pound buck on his shoulders—Jed's buck.

GRAND JURY TO ACT ON TAX EVASIONS

Accused Men Are Listed as "Public Enemies" as Result of U. S. Inquiry

Indictments against several Boston racketeers and lawyers, said to be their associates, will be sought by government officials before the Federal grand jury next week, it was learned today.

The evidence to be presented to the grand jury deals with alleged income tax evasions and has been gathered by special agents of the international revenue department whose presence here the Boston Evening American has previously exclusively disclosed.

Some of the individuals under investigation were secretly named as "public enemies" by the government, and when the spotlight was thrown on their affairs others became involved, it was said today.

Conferences being held between the special agents and Asst. U. S. Atty. Hubert C. Thompson is understood to be paving the way to the grand jury probe.

Plans for bringing the case to a head are being shaped and it is expected that the indictments will be asked when the August sitting of the grand jury winds up its regular business next week.

The August meeting of the jury was previously postponed until next Monday, and it is believed this was part of the plan of action, the government agents desiring a little more time to perfect their case.

SCORES OFFER HOME TO BABY

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

A mother's appeal has touched the public's heart. Countless offers to adopt Mrs. H. W.'s six-months-old baby have come into this office.

Every offer is a sympathetic understanding of the young woman's [illegible] and her inability to support three children.

Every offer makes promise of [illegible] care and interested attention, of a comfortable home and of love and affection.

Officer Charles D. Anderson of Dorchester, attached to the traffic [illegible] of the Boston police [illegible], told the Boston Evening American that his [illegible]-year-old daughter insisted that he bring the little one to her.

"When Mary saw the picture of the infant in the paper she insisted that her daddy adopt Anne Clare and make her her sister. We have a comfortable home. I have a son, 15. These two children, my wife and myself, comprise our family. We should like very much to adopt the baby and bring her up," he said.

"I have no children of my own and I am looking for a baby girl to adopt. I will give it the best of care and it will have a good home," one writes.

Another [illegible]:

"I would love to take the baby and care for her for a time without expense to you. If you want her again in a year's time you could have her. If not I would adopt her. Do you not think it would be better to let me keep her for a year or two? I could do well for the baby. Love from a real mother."

The letters are being forwarded to Mrs. H. W. (the paper withholds her name) that she may make the selection of the foster home of her young daughter.

PSYCHO REPORT HIT BY COURT

A report by the Psychopathic Hospital in the case of Miss Lillian Lyford, 39, of Massachusetts ave., Cambridge, charged with larceny of $70 in jewelry from a Boston store, drew criticism from Judge Devlin in municipal court today.

"She is sane but in a slightly elevated mood, and might have been irresponsible when the theft occurred in June," the alienists reported.

Counsel for Miss Lyford then asked that the charge be filed without a finding, whereupon Judge Devlin remarked:

"This policy of calling certain defendants not responsible for their crimes, yet responsible enough to be at large, is causing me grave concern."

He continued the case until Friday, to think it over. This was the seventh time the case has been continued.

Blames Rain for Jam Jouncing 12 Persons

A three-cornered crash between a street car, a truck and a parked automobile today resulted in the arrest of the truck driver for operating after his license had expired.

The truck, operated by Julius Castiline, 26, of Lorne st., Dorchester, pulled out from a curbstone in Dorchester ave., Dorchester, crashed into the street car and caromed off into the parked car of William Wilson of Savin Hill ave.

Twelve passengers in the street car were shaken up, but none were injured. After his arrest Castiline told police his view was obscured by the rain.

Two Wakefield men escaped serious injury today when their automobile was wrecked when it overturned after striking a large rock in Water st., North Saugus.

The men gave their names as Arthur Berwick of Franklin st., the driver, and Harry J. Wilson of Rockland st.

They were treated for cuts on the face and body at the office of Dr. Myron H. Davis.

According to police, the driver lost control of the automobile when it skidded on the wet pavement after striking the rock.

6500 Properties Are Facing Sale for Unpaid Taxes

City Collector William M. McMorrow announced today that 6500 parcels of real estate on which the 1930 taxes remain unpaid will be advertised for sale next Saturday and for three succeeding weeks.

Unless the bills are paid at the end of that period the properties will be sold on Sept. 9.

While the number of parcels involved is 2500 greater than that of last year, the actual amount of money involved is only $2,953,396, or 1.3 per cent more than 1930. This indicates that with very few exceptions those who have been unable to pay their taxes are small property owners.

DR. MARY JONES CHARGES 'PLOT'

Charging she was "railroaded" into Boston State Hospital as insane, Dr. Mary E. Jones, a once wealthy owner of South End real estate, today filed a bill in equity in Suffolk court against Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, city health commissioner, Dr. James V. May, head of the hospital, and Alfred Benfied, owner of a mortgage on her home at 8 James st., South End.

Dr. Jones was committed May 14 following a police raid on her home and the ejection of 40 stray cats and dogs. She was released in custody of her counsel a week later.

The bill asks that the three be enjoined from interfering with her.

Peter Kastoulis, 30, arrested at the jail with Martins, is a native of Poland. He was twice convicted of offenses against the liquor laws and has just completed a sentence given him [illegible] month.

Savone D'Attino, the third man arrested, is charged with illegal entry into this country. He is 27 years old and faces separation from his wife if the immigration board of inquiry finds for his deportation.

All three will be given hearings at the East Boston immigration station before boards of inquiry appointed by Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, commissioner of immigration for the New England district.

SEEK HIGHER UP IN SCHOOLGIRL LOTTERIES

Police Say Back Bay Pupils Are Victimized in Fake Pool Rackets

Danford Blankhorne, 24, of St. Botolph st., Back Bay, seized yesterday in a police drive against lotteries in the Back Bay district, today drew a continuance to Aug. 21 on a charge of setting up and promoting a lottery.

Blankhorne, accused of having more than $1500 worth of "nigger pool" tickets in his possession, was one of several alleged lottery agents rounded up in the district following complaints that lotteries were preying on school girls attending summer sessions at Back Bay institutions.

Many of the lottery "rackets" patronized by the schoolgirls are fakes, police say.

Blankhorne's continuance was sought in municipal court by police investigating the gambling pools. Through Blankhorne's connections they hope to pick up the trail of "higher-ups" in one of the most lucrative of the lotteries.

MRS. SOLOMON ON LOVE AT THE BEACH

By HELEN ROWLAND

MY DAUGHTER, consider the fashionable Beach Resort where the wild waves [illegible] their beating upon the [illegible] eternally pursue the MEN

Where the men adorn themselves in flowing garments which modestly cover their shrinking forms, and the women wear the trousers.

• • •

W[illegible] [illegible] displayed [illegible] their glory [illegible] skin [illegible] mosquito bites.

• • •

Where the pajamas are gayer than the chorus-girl's whoopee party, and the spreading hats rival the aurora borealis, even as the noses of the men and the shoulders of the women rival the summer sunsets

• • •

W[illegible] sisters and [illegible] ALONE in [illegible]

• • •

Where the dowagers do many stunts to reduce their tonnage, and thereby acquire an appetite for pate de fote gras and cream puffs, which putteth on the extra pounds

• • •

W[illegible] with every moonrise [illegible] d[illegible] before the [illegible] of the last waltz have died

• • •

Where cocoanut-oil adorneth the noses and the shoulders, and banana-oil floweth freely from the lips.

• • •

W[illegible] and [illegible] won[illegible] For what else have they to DO?

• • •

Where everything that filleth the moments is of great import—but nothing of great import ever occureth.

• • •

W[illegible] with half-baked youths and [illegible] of partners. Where the women put [illegible] storage and the men keep their con[illegible] and their hearts insulated

• • •

Where the sentiments are lighter than summer love, but the scandals are darker than the roots of blondined hair.

Verily, verily, the Beach Resort is a world in itself, wherein the players have their exits and their entrances, and each playeth his little comedy. But when the snow flieth, each shall [illegible] heart, "What on earth did I ever SEE in THAT [illegible] THAT man?"

GRAND HOTEL :-: By VICKI BAUM

Preysing Is Victor in Big Bluff

"AN[illegible] [illegible] agreement [illegible]

But as [illegible] years past [illegible] business, I [illegible] perfectly definite arrangements.

You must [illegible] dear Preysing [illegible] the same inflexion [illegible] yourself. There is no [illegible] denying that [illegible]

[illegible]

But [illegible] us no further. So you will pardon me [illegible] these gentlemen into our confidence in this matter."

Zinnowitz floundered on with his conciliatory discourse. Preysing had gone pale. So [illegible] he Zinnowitz has [illegible] the letters. Good God, but that's swindling. If [illegible] actual fraud. "Negotiations final broken off. Brosemann," he [illegible] and he saw the blue-black and blurred writing of the telegram.

Ge[illegible]

"There's no object in our legal friend talking himself hoarse," he said, leaning over the table. "Before we say any more, I must ask Herr Preysing to tell us plainly how far the negotiations with Burleigh & Son have gone."

"I refuse," said Preysing.

"I must insist on it, if I am to continue the discussion," said Gerstenkorn.

"Then," said Preysing, "I beg you in any further discussion to regard that matter as non-existent."

"Am I to conclude then that all prospects of an agreement with Burleigh & Son are over?" asked Gerstenkorn.

"Conclude what you like," said Preysing.

At this they were all silent for nearly a minute.

"Then I suppose there's nothing further to be said for the present," Gerstenkorn said finally. "I suppose we may as well conclude our little discussion. We can always continue it in writing."

He got up, and his chair made grooves in the thick pile carpet of this very handsome conference chamber. Preysing, however, kept his seat. He took out a cigar with elaborate care, and with elaborate care cut off its end; then he lit it, took a pull, and began to smoke with an abstracted and deeply meditative expression on his face. His cheeks were speckled with tiny red veins.

There is no doubt that General Director Preysing was a thorough father, a man who stood for organization and order and the strongholds of convention. His life went by program. It lay open to inspection like a map and the sight of it could not fail to please. It was a life of card indexes, of red tape, of many pigeon holes and much hard work. He had never yet committed the least irregularity. Neverless, there must have been a bad spot in him somewhere a minute nucleus of moral disease which was destined to get a hold on him and bring him low. Yes, there must, in spite of all, have been just the merest trace of some inflammation, some microscopic speck on the irreproachable purity of his moral waistcoat.

He uttered no cry for help at this fatal moment when the conference was broken off, though his plight was bad enough now to justify a cry for help and succor. He stood up gripping his cigar between his teeth as he felt for something in his waistcoat pocket with a sensation of complete drunkenness.

"Pity," he said casually, amazed at the careless tone of his voice, as it issued from his mouth past his cigar. "Great pity. What is deferred is done with. So that's the end of that. And now that you have broken off, I don't mind telling you that we put through the agreement with Burleigh & Son last night. I got the news early this morning."

He drew out his hand from beneath his coat, and in it was the folded telegram: Negotiations finally broken off." A sense of childish and triumphant roguery came over him as he stood there after telling this thundering lie which bordered on downright fraud and with the telegram before him on the green table. He did not even know whether he wished to bluff them or merely to make an effective exit out of the mess into which he had got himself. Schweimann, the less controlled of the two Cremnitz people, made an instinctive grab for the telegram. Preysing, very quickly and with an almost ironical smile, raised his hand from the table, unfolded the telegram, folded it up again and put it back into his pocket with a deliberate air. Dr. Waitz, further down the table, looked foolish. Zinnowitz whistled. The one thin piping note came very oddly from his sagacious Chinese lips.

Gerstenkorn began to laugh and wheeze at once.

"My good fellow! You're a deal smarter than you look. You've properly led us by the nose. Come on, now we must have another talk over this."

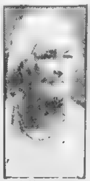
Husband or Child---Must Wife Make Her Choice?

By WINIFRED BLACK



Winifred Black

ELSIE is home again. And every one knows Elsie is glad of it—except Elsie.

She's glad too in a way and she's sorry in a way.

She's glad to be with her two children again. One of them is three years old, a perfect darling, and the other is just a baby not walking yet, but too entrancing for words.

Elsie missed the children so when she was away from them that it fairly made her ill. She dreamed about them every night, and in the morning when she couldn't see their little round heads on the pillow, she felt as if her heart had dropped right out of her body, and someone was kicking it through a thorny desert.

Was the nurse really reliable?

What if the baby should have the croup some night and she couldn't bear to think of it.

And little Miss Muffet—what if something happened to her?

It made Elsie faint and weak just to think of it.

But Elsie's husband is in big business, and every once in a while he has to go to Europe or to Asia, or to Cuba or somewhere 'way across miles of tumbling water, and he always wants Elsie to go with him.

Tom's a shrewd, wide-awake up-to-the-minute man of affairs but he's desperately in love with his own wife, and can't bear to be separated from her. So he begs her to go with him and Elsie is awfully in love with Tom, and she goes—and then she's homesick and worried and heartsick and Tom is a good fellow and sends Elsie home on the best ship in the best cabin that money can buy.

And Elsie's heart is eased and she holds her children close and close and thinks, I'll never leave them again, the poor darlings, never again.

And then she begins to worry about Tom.

Tom is so helpless about so many little things, and Tom gets so lonesome and Tom is rich and good looking. There was that time in Egypt when the designing widow was sorry for poor, neglected Tom, and things went very badly 'till Tom opened his eyes and saw the widow as she really was.

And Elsie gets lonesome for Tom and forlorn and neglected. And some of Elsie's old admirers run around and send flowers and act sort of sympathetic, and Elsie is just beginning to realize that for a few years she'll have to make up her mind to choose between the children and Tom.

Poor Elsie, there are thousands of women in the world in the same predicament. Some are poor women, who give their youth and vitality to their children—and lose their husbands.

And some give their life and vitality to their husband—and neglect their children.

Life wasn't so luxurious in the simple old days, maybe, but somehow it wasn't half so complicated—was it?

Science Warns of Fake Cures for Cancer

By DR. R. S. COPELAND.

Dr. Copeland

IN A RECENT radio speech made by Lord Moynihan, president of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, he warned against [illegible] cancer cures. With great sincerity and earnestness this eminent surgeon warned against the danger of untried and unconfirmed methods of cure.

Many persons who know they have cancer fail to avail themselves of the opportunity to rid themselves of this dread disease. Instead, they delay, trying [illegible] and means of treatment [illegible] correct one.

By [illegible] paper [illegible] the American Medical [illegible] endeavored to [illegible] of this danger. [illegible] man[illegible] effe[illegible] for cancer.

Cancer [illegible] dreadful disease. But in most cases if recognized early and treated early it can be entirely eradicated.

Statistics issued by the British Ministry of Health indicate that in cases of cancer of the breast operated on in the early stages of the disease, 90.1 per cent of the patients were well 10 years after operation. It was pointed out that where the disease was neglected [illegible] resorted to at a late stage 91 per cent failed to recover.

Treatment [illegible] no avail when [illegible] treatment and refuse to be operated on in the beginning. After suffering torture, in desperation the patient may permit the surgeon to operate. Unfortunately, it may then be too late to bring about a cure.

The Murder of the Choir Singer

By ANTHONY ABBOT

"IN CONSIDERING the possibilities, those three I definitely considered," said Colt. "Then we began assembling the facts as best we could. It was the photograph of Bessie Struber that first made me consider her seriously. I had Lengel put a man on her trail. He had a stroke of luck, in her insurance agent, who told him she had an insurance policy on a small child.

"He learned that the child was in a home. Of course, he went there at once and demanded the records. From those he ascertained that the child was born in a hospital at Norfolk, the names were changed, but the identities were clear to the detective.

"The Norfolk police co-operated and from the nurse down there we got the poison story. Now when I had Bessie Struber's fingerprints in that closet, and on the hymnrack, and on the jar of paste, I felt sure that she knew the truth. It was hard to tear it from her, and I had to be pretty brutal. I [illegible] say."

Dougherty s[illegible]

"You know, Thatcher," he be[illegible], "I hadn't really made up my mind to indict Mrs. Beazeley. I was only pretending. I had an object. You never function at concert pitch unless you are showing me how wrong I am."

"In the meantime," said Colt, "what about Bessie Struber?"

"She doesn't have to worry much," responded Dougherty. "We simply indict her for manslaughter, she pleads self-defense, I accept the plea, and it's all over."

"That won't do."

"Why not?"

"Bessie Struber's kid has started life under enough handicaps already. She has the money to go to Europe. Why put her through a perfectly silly and useless trial? Its only purpose would be to satisfy public curiosity."

"And show people that our laws must be enforced," reminded Dougherty.

True enough. But they won't believe that anyhow. And why fasten a stigma on that pretty little boy who is at this moment in his mother's arms? Why not keep her confession a part of the secret achieves—and let her go?"

Dougherty had listened to that last idea, a cigar smoldering in the left corner of his mouth, his face set in the frank disapproval.

"Colt," he declared, "this is the hottest spell New York has known in any June since the Weather Bureau was started. I have worked myself into a lather over this case. I have lost sleep, I have lost my vacation, and I have pretty near lost my temper. But one thing District Attorney Dougherty has never lost yet. That's his sense of decency and fair play."

"Now, Dougherty," protested Colt, "don't make a political speech."

"No," consented Dougherty, rising. "All I meant to say was that I agree with you. The Beazeley-Saunders murders will never be solved. I should have listened to you in the first place."

And Dougherty and Thatcher Colt together descended the stairs of the house with the red door.

THE END

Avoid Gossip, Says Miss Fairfax

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I went with a young man for several weeks and then, without much of an explanation he stopped coming. While we were going together he told me that he cared for me a great deal, and he knew I cared for him, as I was foolish enough to tell him. Now that we do not see each other he has told several of his boy friends that he isn't going with me any more because he cared for me and he could see that I didn't care for him. He thinks I was kidding him along all the while and just went with him to go places. He refuses to say a word against me and it all puzzles me very much. I really love him and want him back. Do you think he really does doubt my affection or is using that as an excuse? I have seen him since in public and he is cordial enough but not friendly.

DORA.

Dear Dora: In all probability your trouble with this young man is that you have allowed yourself to talk over your affair with third persons. Intermediaries of this kind seldom help matters. Even with the best intentions they are so likely to get things mixed up. Surely you have gone far enough with this young man to tell him that you wish to see him the next time you have an opportunity to do so. But don't talk to other people about it.

Oil Away Those Blemishes on Dry Skin

By MISS HUDDLESTON

Josephine Huddleston

BECAUSE OF the already dry condition of an actually dry skin, the corrective regimes for eliminating beauty-destroying blemishes require a bit more time than when the skin is normal or oily. Before getting down to the actual corrective treatments, let me say that diet, exercise and sufficient drinking water are all of equal importance in bringing about satisfactory and lasting results.

Fresh fruits and vegetables, with a minimum amount of heavier foods should be eaten daily, and, while the diet should of necessity include sweets, for the time being and while correcting skin blemishes, it is well to partake of all sweets sparingly.

So much for the basic rules of bringing about a normal skin condition, and now the actual caring of the skin is rather simple, and results will be noticed in a surprisingly short time.

First, the skin should be well cleansed. Pure oil of sweet almonds is most effective. Then after the pores have been freed of all impurities, saturate a towel in hot water and hold about one-quarter of an inch from the face. Repeat until the pores are sufficiently open to accept the next application of oil.

This time, however, the oil should be heated, and, while still hot, applied to the face.

Now wring out a towel or wash cloth in warm (not hot) water and gently press to the contour of the face. Repeat five or six times. Then, without drying the skin, let the oil remain on for at least fifteen minutes, at which time the skin may be gently patted dry and it is then ready for whatever make-up is necessary.

That the cost of a 3-minute telephone call by number from Boston to New York is only a dollar at day rates? And that the evening rate from 7 to 8.30 p.m. drops to eighty-five cents, and the night rate to sixty cents?

By road, New York is about 240 miles. By telephone, it's only a few seconds. And the cost is surprisingly small.

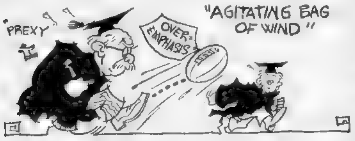
Prohibition's Clan.
Football Joins It.
Agitating Wind Bag.
Consider the Braves.
Ponder Over Red Sox.
Then Put Up Hammer.

LEONARD NOT SO GOOD ON SKATES

It isn't only poisoned booze Prohibition floods the land,
It floods us with hypocrecy, we lie to beat the band.
And even college presidents say one thing, do another,
And football overemphasis is Prohibition's brother.

Prohibition and football are blood brothers in hypocrisy. Prohibition says we can't drink yet we are the drinkingest nation in the world. Colleges howl about overemphasis in football and then set aside a half a million dollar "war fund." Remember Pennsylvania's squawk about overemphasis of football? Reams of publicity was sent out about taking football out of the hands of the coaches and giving it back to the boys. And now we see that a huge Penn football squad is preparing to leave Philadelphia and go high up in the Poconos "to train for fall training." Ain't Prohibition grand! It is making us Yankees a nation of hypocrites who eternally are saying one thing and doing another.

Which all touches on and appertains to what Prexy White of Cornell said way back in 1873 when they attempted to arrange a football game between Cornell and Michigan. "I will not permit 30 men to travel 400 miles to agitate a bag of wind." Hee! Haw!



And look at the gang that turns out to see the boys agitate a bag of wind these days. The real agitating of the bag of wind however is the college heads talking about overemphasis of football.

Pat was visiting the clergyman. It was a cold day and the good priest gave Pat a drop of the craychure to warm his in'ards. While pouring the libation the good priest thought it opportune to give Pat a little temperance lecture.

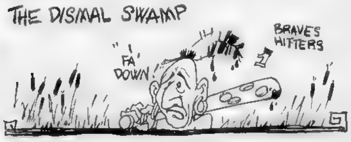
"Pat," he began. "Do you know that every time you take a drink you are driving a nail in your coffin?"

"Tis true, Father," answered Pat, as the drink went down the hatch, "but you might as well drive another nail while you have the hammer in your hand."

While we have the hammer in our hand we might as well consider the Braves and the Red Sox. We don't like the view of em down in the second division. They've been down there too long. Boston has had too many good teams, too many great teams, to have to suffer so long from second-divisionitis.

Rome wasn't built in a day and neither was a ball club. Even Connie Mack with his brains and John McGraw with brains and a bankroll found that out. Both Braves and Red Sox have improved over last year. But neither one is going to get anywhere without new material. Wonder what Braves and Red Sox are doing about next year? Of course this year's race still is the big thing. Shono Collins is having troubles enough keeping the Sox out of the cellar and Bill McKechnie worries enough keeping the Braves within striking distance of the first division, without giving too much thought to next year. Still you note the Yankees are grooming Jackie Saltzgaver of St. Paul and Frankie Crosetti of San Francisco for infield berths next season. And this despite the fact that on paper the Yankees look fully as strong as the Athletics. It's only the flying start gained by the Athletics which is holding them in first place.

The Braves will not be a first division club, let alone a pennant contender, without hitters. Last Spring the wail was weak pitching. But the Braves pitchers have come through better than expected while the hitters have fallen down lamentably. Weak hitting may cause the Braves to drop back into sixth place, last year's berth. If they don't look out they'll get the habit.



It's a funny thing about the Braves' batsmen. They clout the Cardinal twirlers, who have all other opposition stopped, all over the lot, yet fold up and bat like minor leaguers against supposedly inferior pitching.

What the Braves need most is a batting punch in the infield, a hard hitting catcher and a fast first baseman. Freddie Maguire is a sweet fielder but he isn't hitting a lick. Urbanski until recently was a batting flop. But the new third baseman apparently is finding his batting eye. Rabbit Maranville can't last forever.

The Red Sox have Earl Webb, Hal Rhyne and a pitching staff. What they need is a ball club.

Now we'll put the hammer on the shelf. Guess our breakfast must have disagreed with us. We'll have to switch from ham and eggs to eggs and ham.

Let's wind up by cooling off with a little hockey. Benny Leonard's fistic comeback means he is out as president of the Phillies. And Philadelphia probably will be out a hockey club Other members of the league want the franchise to go to Chicago, Cleveland or Pittsburgh. The Windy City is likely to get it. Chicago can stand two teams like New York, Boston and Montreal.

His invasion of ice hockey turned out a costly fling
Benny's fists made him a fortune and that was rawther nice
But wasn't it beastly rotten to lose it on the ice?

SAILOR K. O.'S SNYDER IN GARDEN FRAY

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Next in line for Ernie Schaaf, New England's member of the Three Threats—Schaaf, Retzlaff and Hamas—who promise to pull boxing out of the Slough of Despond, is Vittorio Campolo, the Big Steer of the Pampas.

The Blond Terror meets the giant Argentinian at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, one week from next Thursday. Schaaf tuned up for the Campolo go by blowing Angus Snyder, the transplanted Canadian from Kansas, off the fistic map in the fifth round in the Boston Garden last night.

Ernie Schaaf, the fighter, is a young terror. Ernie Schaaf, the boxer, is not so good. For four rounds, last night, the crowd of 10,000—the paid attendance was announced to be 9500 and the receipts $12,200—saw Schaaf box the Canadian-Kansan and keep his haymaker in camphor.

Either because he thought Snyder too tough or purposely carried him to give the crowd a run for their money Schaaf did not un[illegible] [illegible] until he had cleared the way with a four round boxing barrage and slowed Snyder down with a mauling attack on the [illegible]ness.

Dynamite Right Explodes Snyder

The Blond Dynamiter of Wrentham touched off the knockout fuse in the fifth round. Suddenly clearing decks for action the former sailor dropped a depth bomb in the shape of a perfectly timed inside right to the chin. It exploded on the "button" and down went Snyder.

Angus got on one knee and listened to Referee Johnny Martin droning off the count. He got up as Martin was reaching "9." Schaaf was on business bent and he worried Snyder across the ring with a vicious barrage of lefts and rights to body and jaw. Getting him near the ropes the Wrentham Dynamiter hooked a left and crossed a right to the jaw and down went poor Angus again.

The cobwebs still were in Snyder's eyes when he tottered to his feet at "9" on the second knockdown. Schaaf was on him like a wolf at the kill, slashing, cutting away with savage, vicious short arm blows with all of his weight and leg leverage behind him.

Ernie gave no mercy. He showed the heart of a killer. Two cruel lefts and a terrific right to the jaw finished Snyder.

Angus' knees crinkled and he sank groping to the floor grasping at Ernie's legs like a drowning man clutching at a straw. He was "all in." Another punch might have proved fatal. Referee Johnny Martin wisely refrained from counting. The referee waved Schaaf to his corner and signalled for the hospital corps to come from Snyder's corner.

Sailor Not as Good as Against Maloney

The giant 208 pound Wrentham youngster, did not look as good against Snyder as he did against Maloney and Gagnon. Snyder was of tougher fiber and Schaaf chose to box and wear him down before unleashing the haymaker. Against Maloney and Gagnon, Schaaf cut loose at the opening bell and didn't let up until he had both men down for the fatal 10. When he boxes Ernie is ineffective. To win Ernie must slug and slug from the first bell.

How Jack Dorval, the Hunter of the Alleghenies, knocked out George La Rocco of New York and earned a match with Schaaf and what happened in the other bouts is told by George Grimm in other columns.

Popeye, the famed sailor man, couldn't have done a better job setting Angus Snyder "among the sweet peas" than did Ernie Schaaf of Wrentham, in the Garden ring. GUILFORD IS DRUBBED BY YOUNGSTER

Montreal, Que., Aug. 12 (AP)—The United States contingent had been cut to three today as 16 survivors in the Canadian amateur golf championship moved into the second round of match play.

Arthur (Dutchy) Yates of Rochester, N. Y., William A. Ryan of Detroit and his son, Francis W. Ryan, successfully negotiated the first round, but the Boston "siege gun," Jesse Guilford, J. Van Nostrand of Wheaton, Ills., and Jack McCarthy of Boston, all were eliminated.

Guilford's drubbing at the hands of young Carroll Stuart of Montreal, 12 and 11, was the outstanding upset of the first round.

SARAH PALFREY PLAYS SISTER

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 12 (AP)—Unlike most of her British sisters of the racquet, Joan Ridley, competing in the Eastern court tennis championships now in progress here, likes to talk.

"I'm here on my own," she says, "and I don't worry about no-talking edicts. Besides, I like to talk."

Miss Ridley, who failed of selection to the British Wightman cup team and came over to this country on a tour of "vindication," admits to 28 years, six of them in tournament tennis.

She thinks her greatest tennis achievement was in reaching the semi-final round of the 1929 British championships at Wimbledon along with her close friend, Mrs. F. [illegible] Goldsack Pittman, who also is competing here. Both were eliminated in the semi-finals, Miss Ridley by Helen Jacobs and Mrs. Pittman by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody.

Although both she and Mrs. Pittman have played well in the early rounds of the turf court championship, trouble looms just ahead. Today Miss Ridley was matched against Josephine Cruickshank of Santa Ana, Cal., and Mrs. Pittman against Dorothy Weisel of Sacramento.

Other quarter final matches pitted Mrs. Marion Zinderstein Jessup against Mrs. Lillian Scharman Hester of Brooklyn, and Sarah Palfrey of Boston against her sister, Mianne.

Stay-at-Homes Can See and Hear Fight

New York, Aug. 12 (AP)—A television broadcast of an exhibition boxing bout between Benny Leonard, former lightweight titleholder, and Jimmie Martin, an amateur boxer, is to be made by the Columbia Broadcasting System over its television station W2XAB, Thursday at 10 a. m. (E. D. T.)

The "scanning" equipment to be used has been mounted on a movable standard permitting the engineer to follow the boxers around the ring in the same manner as with a moving picture camera.

GIRL, 12, TO GO AFTER SWIM RACE TITLE

"Like mother, like daughter."

This variation of an old adage will hold true in the Boston Evening American's 16th annual girls swimming races in Charles river basin on August 22, when 12-year-old Elinor Weene will compete.

Little Miss Weene, who is a member of the Boston Swimming Association, is 220-yard junior New England champion. She comes by her honors naturally as her mother, Mrs. Frederic Weene of Somerville, startled sporting circles by swimming to Boston Light. She was the first person to swim to the Light. That was before her marriage when she was Miss Rose Pitnof.

Mrs. Weene will be on hand at the Boston American races to advise her daughter and cheer her on to victory. Elinor participated in the American's races last summer and her fine showing then was considered a forecast of further honors.

Earl Spencer, director of Whitins Community Association, has informed the swimming editor that Miss Claire Walker of his organization, will defend her national junior 880-yard title which she won in the Boston races August 2. She will also enter the New England one-mile championship, one of the features of the Boston American race program.

Miss Gussie Schnabel of Boston Swimming Association is expected to give Miss Walker a big battle for first place in the mile.

Moxie Head's First Vacation in 35 Years

Frank M. Archer is today celebrating his birthday by taking his first vacation in thirty-five years. He's going to take the day off.

Frank M. Archer

With the completion of the merger of the Moxie Company, The Moxie Company of America and the Pureoxia Company, and a volume of July business, the largest in 50 years, there is reason for congratulations.

He says there may be a depression, but as far as he is concerned he doesn't know anything about it.

Salem Church Fund Aided by Benefit

The biggest crowd of the season, 7000 in all, was present at the North Shore Garden in Salem Monday at a benefit for St. Thomas' parish of Salem. The use of the garden was donated by the owner, A. S. Brown Jr., and a considerable sum was raised for the parish, which has built a new church.

POLITICS

Notes and Gossip About People You Know

Governor Ely last Arbor Day pulled off his coat and planted a [illegible] leaf maple on the Mt. Vernon st. side of the State House. Because of the abuse given to the tree recently by two young vandals, Supt. of Buildings Fred H. Kimball has found it necessary to remove it. Whether a new tree will be planted by the Governor at once or the space reserved for next Arbor Day is yet to be decided.

CASSON TENDS TO BUSINESS

BRESLIN CHASES FIRES

John J. Breslin, who resigned from the Boston fire department to campaign for election to City Council from Ward 20, West Roxbury, resembles in some respects the proverbial fire horse who was retired to a milk wagon. Yesterday Breslin discovered a fire in an office in a Tremont st. building and had the blaze under control when the apparatus arrived.

McGRATH UNOPPOSED

Present indications are that City Councillor "Joe" McGrath of Ward 13, Dorchester, will be returned to that office without opposition. To date no candidates for that office have appeared at the office of the election commissioners in City Hall to make application for nomination papers.

Central Loadings Decrease in Week

During the week ended August 8, cars loaded on the New York Central Lines totaled [illegible], as against 63,375 in the like week of 1930.

BUSES REVERSE TREND OF BIG RAILROADS

By FRANK H. MILOON

While the big railroads are losing passengers, it is evident that buses are reversing the trend shown by the carriers in this respect. In the first half of 1931 the companies operated by Greyhound Management Co. earned a net income of $735,838.02 after deducting depreciation, interest and taxes, as compared with a deficit of $248,499.86 in the first half of 1930, an improvement in net results amounting to $984,337.88.

* * *

Operating revenues for this passenger carrier in the six months of 1931 were $6,148,121.62, as against $5,850,929.40 for the same period in 1930, an increase of 5.1 per cent. The gain in revenue was obtained in spite of a reduction in bus mileage operated from 19,034,826 miles in the first half of 1930 to 18,702,292 miles in 1931.

T. R. Langan, who has been made northeastern district manager of Westinghouse Electric, has been with the big company over 20 years. When the New Haven had its big electrification program under way, Mr. Langan supervised it for about three years. He has been connected with all the major voltage A. C. railroad electrification work done in the United States.

T. R. Langan

* * *

Current condition of railroad finances, in general, resulting in the appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission for higher rates on freight, has held up plans for additional electrification. It had been hoped that electrification might be extended into the vicinity of the Boston terminals, as in New York and elsewhere, but the chances for its coming today appear regretfully remote.

* * *

All the street railways aren't showing gloomy figures. Today, for example we find the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co. reporting net income for the June, 1931, quarter of $24,013, against $22,504 a year ago. For the half year ended June 30, 1931, net profit of $59,395 compares with $42,741 a year ago.

* * *

Although net sales of B. F. Goodrich Co. were lower for the first half of 1930 than in the like 1931 period, second quarter earnings showed a marked betterment of the first quarter figures. Replacement demands have been large. The company's officials say the current position is very satisfactory. With crude rubber selling around a nickel a pound, close to its historic low, as compared with $1.25 or more during the British monopoly period, the rubber companies are in a fine position as regards securing needed supplies.

Eight New England banks are this year observing the centenary of their founding, and six are observing their 50th anniversary.

Those who have passed the century mark this year include the Calais National, Calais, Me.; Laconia Savings Bank, Laconia, N. H.; Merchants National Bank, Boston; Dedham Institution for Savings, Dedham National Bank of Fairhaven, Fairhaven, Mass.; National Grand Bank, Marblehead, Mass.; Blackstone Canal National Bank, Providence, and Windham National Bank, Windham, Ct.

Those who have passed the half-century mark include Lancaster National Bank, Lancaster, N. H.; Pemigewasset National Bank, Plymouth, N. H.; First National Bank, Poultney, Vt.; Brockton Savings Bank, Brockton; Hudson National Bank, Hudson, and the First National Bank, Wallingford, Ct.

Foreign Copper Sales Are Small

Copper buying was small here and abroad. There is apparently more demand at 7½ cents delivered than there is metal available at that price. Whether there would be sufficient demand to take care of volume offerings at 7½ cents delivered is problematical.

There is no pressure appearing on the market. Producers are virtually out of the market asking 8 cents delivered and have handed over the foreign market to custom smelters.

Foreign sales Monday totaled 2,000,000 pounds, but were small Tuesday.

Sulphur Production Declines in Texas

Production of sulphur in Texas in the quarter ended June 30 was 667,730 tons, as against 649,351 tons in the previous quarter and 711,966 tons in the second quarter of 1930.

Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. from its Matagorda and Wharton County fields produced 374,049 tons, as against 403,634 tons in the previous quarter and 490,930 in the like 1930 quarter.

Sugar Meltings Are Lowered Slightly

Total meltings of 14 sugar refiners from January 1 to August 1 were 2,565,000 long tons, against 2,895,000 a year before. Total deliveries were 2,365,000 long tons, against 2,705,000.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Professional selling of New York Central, Union Pacific, Atchison and other leading rails today threw cold water on the efforts of the bulls to keep the forward movement in hectic progress for another day. Nevertheless, good rallying tendencies appeared in spots from time to time.

Steels Act Well Most of Session

Steel stocks acted well most of today's session. The optimistic tone of the weekly steel trade surveys was reflected in a slightly better demand for the steels. United States Steel soon [illegible] advance about a point above yesterday's close and over 5 [illegible] above yesterday's opening. This sharp rally meant the recovery of all the ground lost in nearly three weeks.

Gen. Motors Sets High on the Move

One Wall st. writer said General Motors was being offered on a scale upward, but this leader today quickly duplicated the best price it has recorded since the final week of June.

Coppers Held Back by Rise in Stores

Coppers were handicapped today by a further increase in red metal in the hands of producers, despite the heavy shrinkage in production in July.

Bendix Aviation's Earnings Keep Up

Brokerage house recommendations of Bendix Aviation looked good to many today when the corporation reported for the first half net profit of $1,512,345, which included $221,000 of non-recurrent profit, equal to 72 cents a share. In the like period last year the corporation reported net profit of $1,530,397, equal to 73 cents a share.

American Can Is Natural Leader

It was recorded here last week that, regardless of the longer-term bearishness on American Can, the stock was being covered by important speculators who feared that the stock would be a natural leading participant in any upturn which might develop. Performance of the stock since then has fully confirmed this opinion. Bull sponsors for the general market are utilizing "Can" as one of their prime favorites in the hope of inducing general optimism.

Earnings Gain for Loose-Wiles

Loose-Wiles showed a good increase in earnings in the second quarter and as a result the half year balance was equal to $1.70 or only five cents under the revenues of the first six months of 1930. In some quarters it is asserted the company is now operating at a slightly larger margin of profit and this should bring satisfactory earnings for the final six months of the year. The stock has been holding within a comparatively narrow range recently, although quiet buying was reported previously whenever moderate reactions [illegible] were in evidence in the general list.

Consolidated Gas in Strong Position

Although Consolidated Gas has suffered with other [illegible] of the stocks which went [illegible] [illegible], the company is in an exceptional position, serving the richest and most concentrated territory in the world. The record of steadily increasing earnings has been attracting attention, particularly as earnings increased in the depression year of 1930. The company has paid dividends without interruption for 46 years and is in a strong financial position.

Drug's Business Volume Is Good

Interests close to Drug, Inc., [illegible] that the company has been enjoying [illegible] business in [illegible]. In addition the whole [illegible] has been successful. As a result there have been predictions of record [illegible] for the current year. This would be quite a demonstration [illegible] the general business [illegible].

Granite City's Expense Control

Granite City Steel is one of the companies which apparently have taken control of expenses. Although there was an increase of $61,[illegible] in sales in the second quarter over the preceding three months, [illegible] and expenses are reduced [illegible] 160. With miscellaneous [illegible] smaller and special [illegible] what higher the net [illegible] expanded $66,983 [illegible] a share for the [illegible] cents a share in the [illegible] of the year.

Underwood Elliott May Cut Dividend

Action on the Underwood Elliott common dividend is scheduled to be taken by directors today. Because of the increasing policy among industrial executives to bring rates of payments to shareholders down to a point more commensurate with current earning power, reduction in the Underwood dividend to half the present $5 annual basis would occasion little surprise. The board would be entirely justified in so doing because a $2.50 yearly disbursement would conform closely to estimated net for the full year of $2.80 a share or thereabouts.

Columbian Carbon Earnings Lower

Among the former speculative favorites, Columbian Carbon has withstood the recent market unsettlement quite impressively. The stock is currently about 15 points above the extreme 1931 bottom. Its ability to hold steadfast would seem to indicate strong market sponsorship rather than any unusual developments in the affairs ofg the company.

Amusement Stocks In Better Demand

Loews, Paramount, Radio Keith and other active amusement stocks were in increasingly better demand as the session advanced. A five-point jump in Warner Brothers bonds in that section of the market reflected the improving financial position of the company.

UTILITY'S NET SHOWS RISE

American Commonwealth Power Corp. and affiliated companies for year ended June 30, 1931, report increased net income over same period a year ago. While gross earnings showed a slight decline from the previous year, net income shows an increase of $1,240,387 resulting largely from a reduction of $1,[illegible] in operating expenses for the 12-month period.

During June the properties of Vermont Lighting Corp. and St. Johnsbury Gas Co. of Vermont, formerly owned by American Commonwealths Power Corp., were transferred to its affiliated New England company, American Commonwealths Power Associates. The latter company had annual gross revenues for the 12 months ended June 30, 1931, of $1,282,827 and net income of $552,186, but these earnings are not consolidated with the earnings of American Commonwealths Power Corp. All the New England properties of American Commonwealths Power Associates are operated from a central headquarters at Lowell, largest city in the New England group.

Balance of earnings available on the average amount of "A" and "B" common stock of American Commonwealths Power Corp. outstanding for the period ended June 30, 1931, was at the rate of $2.38 per share before depreciation allowances and $1.65 per share after deduction for depreciation reserves.

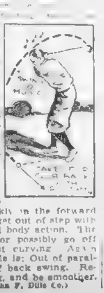
GOOD GOLF

BY CHESTER HORTON

"Golf's Greatest Teacher"



Often [illegible] you [illegible] the [illegible] smack the ball with [illegible] zip and punch. You have reason for [illegible] kind of golf and here it is. The chances are you'll find your swing due may be to action too rapid in the back swing, going beyond the parallel with the direction line. You are wound up [illegible] way that your wrists begin to "crack" too quickly in the forward swing and thus get out of step with the shoulder and body action. The ball will hook, or possibly go off direction without curving. Again your basic trouble is: Out of parallel at the top of back swing. Restrict your swing, and be smoother.

A Few Questions Answered

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY

Our several secretaries have called to our attention the fact that many inquiries from readers of this column have been left unanswered. We regret the delay, and herewith answer all the questions.

F. J. L.—There is nothing in the canons of good taste against it, providing, of course, it harmonizes with the ensemble, but it would seem to us to be a slight error in judgment to attend a Gaelic football game wearing an orange tie.

J. M.—The best sharpshooters admit they got their early training looking for money on the streets of Edinborough.

M. A. K.—Decidedly not. If you have attended Sunday School without missing once in twenty years, leave golf alone. You wouldn't know how to address the ball, anyway.

J. C. C.—The Red Sox did win the pennant in 1918. Bob Quinn has gone the Soviet five-year plan one better. He's working on a 25-year plan, and will win the pennant again in 1943. Don't forget we told you.

Hank C.—I don't care what the label says. It was made in Chelsea.

Singer, Berg Scrap Sought by Promoters

New York, Aug. 12 (US)—The world's championship fight that might have packed either of the New York ball parks a year ago is materializing at last, but no longer for a championship.

Three outdoor clubs were dickering for it today, a match between Al Singer, former lightweight leader, and Jackie Kid Berg, former junior welterweight champion.

Froth Blower Off Track for Season

Toronto, Ont., Aug. 12 (AP)—Froth Blower, winner of the [illegible] and an three-year-old turf [illegible] in the Plate, Breeders' Stakes and William Hendry Memorial Handicap, will race no more this season. The horse pulled a tendon during a workout this week.

ROBBY BEING PUT ON SPOT IN BROOKLYN

New York, Aug. 12 (INS)—Uncle Wilbert Robinson, at 67 one of the grand old men of the national pastime, is being put on [illegible] [illegible] as the Brooklyn [illegible] their last home stand [illegible]

[illegible] of the club's owners and a couple of metropolitan [illegible] editors, disappointed at the team's collapse despite rosy pre-season [illegible]

Some of the indictments against Bobby are that he has used poor judgment in nominating starting pitchers, favored poor hurlers over better ones, yanked his boxmen from the game too quickly, juggled his lineup too frequently and sent valuable players to other clubs.

HAMBLETONIAN STAKE PUT OVER

Goshen, N. Y., Aug. 12 (INS)—[illegible] the famous Hambletonian, the rich classic of the light harness world.

The entire program, scheduled for today at Good Time Park here, was put over until tomorrow when the entire card will be carried out as originally planned.

Advance Date of Brown-Sanstol Go

Montreal, Aug. 12 (AP)—The bout between Al Brown, New Bedford, Mass., and Pete Sanstol, Montreal, to be recognized by the National Boxing Association as for the world's bantamweight title will be held here on Aug. 25, a day earlier than originally scheduled.

Markson Bros. Defeat Swampscott T. T.

The Markson Brothers team of [illegible] defeated the Swampscott T. T. team, 10 to 3, at Memorial Park, Lynn.

What the Stars Did

By the Associated Press.

Tom Oliver, Red Sox—His single in eighth drove in Rhyne with run that beat Browns, 4 to 3.

Bob Grove, Athletics—Scattered Tigers' eight hits, struck out six for 23d victory of year.

Fred Marberry, Senators—Stopped White Sox with three hits to win, 8 to 0.

Mickey Walker versus Benny Leonard; how does that sound? This Thursday night the celebrated pair of pummelers will go three studio rounds for television. An undersized ring will be used so as to fit the apparatus of Columbia's sight transmitters at W2XAB. An announcer will describe the "bout" through CBS's short wave station W2XE. Ten o'clock is the hour.

CLOSING HEAVY IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, Aug. 12—Stocks had a heavy tone n the final dealings in Wall St. today. Trading throughout the quiet session was marked by considerable irregularity, but renewed selling of the rails dominated the trend.

There was a fair rally early in the last hour, but it petered out.

LOSSES ARE RECORDED

Allied Chemical lost more than 3 points and American Can about 2. U. S. Steel, American Telephone, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Rock Island and International Harvester declined a point or so.

Case and New Haven preferred dropped about 5 and Atchison 3. Sales exceeded 1,000,000 shares.

Bulls appeared stunned by the unexpectedly violent success of their drive against the shorts yesterday, and stood aside, permitting the list to lapse back into extreme sluggishness.

Some bullishly inclined traders expressed encouragement over the fact that no abrupt secondary reaction followed yesterday's wide advance.

Midweek business statistics were perhaps slightly more encouraging than otherwise, particularly the steel trade reviews and the freight loadings report, although conclusive signs of a seasonal upturn in general business are still lacking.

Pittsburgh & West Virginia, a comparatively inactive issue, appeared at 46½, a gain of 16½ points since the last transaction, which was last week. Baldwin Locomotive and Bohn Aluminum firmed up a little.

Of the midweek statistics, the weekly freight car loadings report, covering the week ended Aug. 1, was cheering.

CAR LOADINGS UP

Of the gain of 15,541 cars, over the previous week, it was notable that the improvement was about evenly divided between coal and miscellaneous freight. The grain movement showed a further moderate slackening.

The movement of merchandise in less than carload lots, regarded as one of the most valuable barometric items in this tabulation, showed the negligible gain of 864 cars, and will be watched closely during the coming weeks for signs of preparation for autumn trade.

While the various weekly steel trade reviews disagreed as to the extent of improvement in the industry, the tenor was in the main more cheerful. "Iron Age" placed raw steel output as unchanged at 30 per cent of aggregate capacity, while "Steel" estimated that it had expanded from 30 to 32 per cent.

It was agreed, however, that the railroads despite drastic economies, were finding it necessary to buy new equipment, and that the outlook for structural steel was a little more promising." "Iron Age," furthermore saw indications that the automobile makers had underestimated retail demand.

Weekly crude oil figures, showing a gain in daily output of 54,900 barrels, failed to reflect fully the Oklahoma shutdowns, which were not altogether effective until the end of the week. The enormous output from the East Texas field continues to establish new high records while the Texas Legislature tries to agree on a method of control.

In the meantime the gasoline statistics are steadily improving. Stocks have now been reduced 35,881,000 barrels, or roughly 7,000,000 less than a year ago.

The weekly copper statistics, showing a further gain in refined and blister stocks on hand in North and South America of nearly 20,000 tons was in line with expectations, and failed to influence the red metal shares.

GRAINS HIGHER IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Aug. 12 (AP)—Despite a transit break in prices which carried September corn down to a new low record for the season, the market rose today in response to buying based on reports that farmers could save money through burning of corn instead of coal.

Wheat was bullishly affected by indications that the bearish influence of the large domestic winter crop would be overcome by smallness of spring what yields. Temporary setbacks in September corn were associated with selling on the part of two large houses.

Corn closed nervous, ⅛-1¼ cents higher than yesterday's finish, wheat ¾-1 advanced, oats ⅛-⅜ up, and provisions varying from 32 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Cerro de Pasco Corp. Orders Equipment

Equipment that will hoist seventon loads of copper ore out of a 2200-foot vertical shaft in the Andes has been ordered from Westinghouse Electric Mfg. Co. by Cerro de Pasco Copper Corp. of Peru. It includes one 1300-horsepower, 600-volt, direct current motor. Shipment will be made about October 1.

Eastman Will Pay Regular and Extra

New York, Aug. 12 (AP)—Directors of the Eastman Kodak Co. today declared the usual extra dividend of 75 cents and the regular quarterly payment of $1.25 on the common stock, payable Oct. 1 to stockholders of record Sept. 3.

New Haven Meeting to Be Held Aug. 26

Announcement was made today that the next meeting of New Haven directors will be held August 26. It is likely dividend action will be taken at that time. It had been understood that the board meetings would be omitted in August.

STEEL PICTURE IS CONFUSED

New York, Aug. 12 (INS)—The iron and steel industry presents a confused picture because of mixed tendencies, in production and irregularities in the flow of specifications, according to the weekly summary by Iron Age, to be released tomorrow.

Losses and gains virtually counterbalance, and total raw steel requirements remain substantially unchanged.

The summary points out that whether or not steel production has actually reached its lowest point, as now seems to be indicated, it is clear that several important market factors point to an upturn in the near future.

The Iron Age composite prices of pig iron and steel scrap have declined slightly this week, the former to $15.50 from $15.54, and the latter to $9.25 from $9.42 a week ago. The finished steel composite price is unchanged at 2.116 cents a pound.

NORTH AMERICAN CO.

M. K. L., Back Bay—I would like to read the latest report of the North American Co. Can you supply it? I have long been a follower of your service, and so have all my friends who trade in the stock market.

Ans.—The consolidated income statement of the The North American company and subsidiary companies for the 12 months ended June 30, 1931 shows $24,365,005.86 for common stock after all operating expenses, interests charges, depreciation and all other reserves and preferred dividends.

These earnings for common stock represent a decrease of 15.05 per cent compared with those for the 12 months ended June 30, 1930 and of 4.25 per cent compared with those for the 12 months ended June 30, 1929, and are equal to $3.89 per share on the average number of shares of North American common stock outstanding during the 12 months ended June 30, 1931, compared with $5.06 per share for the corresponding period ended June 30, 1930. Appropriations for depreciation reserves equal 10.89 per cent of gross earnings for the 12 months ended June 30, 1931, compared with 10.61 per cent for the 1930 corresponding period.

Gross earnings of $121,827,955.19 for the 12 months ended June 30, 1931 reflect the elimination for that entire period of gross earnings of the former California subsidiaries, which were sold on June 12, 1930 to Pacific Gas and Electric Co., dividends on the common stock of the latter company received therefore being included in other net income. Gross earnings for the preceding 12 months period include those of the California subsidiaries for the full period, excepting only the 18 days from June 12, 1930 to June 30, 1930.

In accordance with its established practice, as pointed out from time to time, the North American company does not include in consolidated income the undistributed earnings applicable to its substantial interests in the Detroit Edison Company, North American Light & Power Company and Pacific Gas and Electric Company.

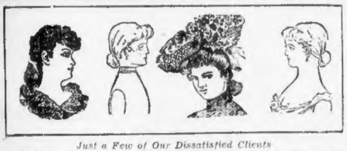
A PLEA FOR FAIR PLAY FROM AMERICA'S WOMANHOOD



Just a Few of Our Dissatisfied Clients

WARNING—While we have the fastest growing What-a-Men Exchange and Bliss Department west of the Mississippi ("Father of Waters") River, we cannot, will not be responsible for hats and coats. Many women take out our What-a-Men on approval, so to speak, and after a short honeymoon, turn these husbands back in exchange for a new model. We cannot make as high an appraisal on turned-in husbands as we would like to make, when these men come back without hats or coats—or with an eye missing. We conscientiously believe, price considered, that our men stand up as long, or longer, than can be expected. The husbands we supply, while not guaranteed, are taken from sources which we believe reliable.

MY ROMANCE

Crooner Feels No Different Now Than Before Marriage

CHAPTER XV

How does it feel to be married?

I have been asked this question so many times in the past ree weeks that I feel I should discuss it thoroughly today.

It may seem very funny to you ien I tell you that I feel little, if y, different than I did four weeks o. The reason for this is quite nple.

Practically a year ago, after Fay d visited me twice in New York. d she had spent several months th my father and mother and me, had come to the conclusion that me day we would be married. Yet ring the time from then on, she ntinued to see and to go out with fferent men; in fact, one of Fay's eatest pleasures was to go out th a group of even five or six n, as she is truly feminine and joys being the cynosure of all es. And I continued to see many my girl friends here in the East. ost of them knew that I knew y, and that she was outstanding my esteem and affection, and t all of them had the opportunity push Fay off her pedestal, just any one of the attractive group men that Fay knew on the Coast uld have supplanted me in her fection.

HAD UNDERSTANDING

The understanding between us as then, as it is now, that if eith- of us ever meets anyone who ems to impress us more strongly every way we are free to devote rselves to that person, but we all be honest enough to tell each her of our change of feeling, if e become positive of it.

I take great delight now in find- g my breakfast and dinner ar- nged for me by one who knows st what I want, and who joins e at those meals, and whom I ad more often with me than be- re. And we are going to be reful that it never shall become humdrum marital existence, hich has killed romance in so any cases.

Only last Sunday night while ncing and dining at a Westches- r, New York, club at which I ice led a small orchestra from ew Haven, we both had consider- ile fun in our respective admira- ons for two people whom we und there. In the orchestra hich furnished the music for the ncing was a tall, very good-look- g musician. His voice was strong d well developed. He was a arming, modest and extremely tive young man, whom I had met veral months ago in Chicago and whom I had talked in the swim- ing pool that afternoon. In fact, had promised to send a picture his sister, who was one of my dio fans.

I knew instantly that he was the nd to appeal to Fay, because I now the type of man she admires. wasn't at all surprised when she ked me who he was, and some- ing about him.

LIKES THEM PLUMP

While swimming at the beach lub in the afternoon, my fancy ad been caught by a little girl, horter than Fay and of an entire- different type, much plumper. fact, Fay kids me about my ad- iration for plump girls, which dmiration I admit. This girl was ittily dressed in a white sports ostume trimmed with a brilliant ed, which went exceedingly well ith her high color and well ressed appearance. She too, was here at the club itself during the vening dinner dance, and I had ointed her out to Fay as an object f my admiration. But it was while ancing that I surprised Fay.

We were near the orchestra hen I intentionally danced close o the musician as he sat there esting. When close enough to peak to him I said: "It's a good hing I married my wife when I lid, or you would have taken her way from me." My reason for aying that was that we had lanced in that same room at the lub the Sunday night before our narriage was performed, exactly our weeks from the Sunday night hat Fay told me of her admiration or his clean-cut appearance. Of ourse this pleased him immensely, hough he blushed to the roots of is hair. Then as we continued to lance, I said to Fay: "Well, how about putting in a good word for ne with the little girl with the urned-up nose?" Fay obtained a encil from one of the waiters, and was about to write a note on one of the menus, but I told her that he gallantry was mine, and that it eally did not demand reciprocation on her part.

WANTS LOVE TO LAST

It is Fay's comradeship and her ntelligent understanding of my incere and whole-hearted admira- ion of beauty in women, her bouy- ancy, the tinkling of her laughter, her animation and the intelligent beauty of her dark eyes that make our association such an extremely pleasant one. It is the very element of chance which makes love and marriage a thrilling adventure, rather than a mere cut and dried incidental chapter of one's life.

I consider it a vital part of my position as husband to try to keep Fay in love with me. I was about to say that I consider it a part of my duty, but in my opinion the question of duty does not enter into real love. Often where duty begins, love begins to end.

Whatever I do for Fay I do willingly, gladly, but certainly out of no sense of duty. When two people love each other, whatever duties they may have toward each other are automatically taken care of by their mutual feelings.

I will always try to provide Fay with whatever she wants, not because of my natural obligations of a husband to support and provide for his wife, but because I love her and want to please her and because I want her to love me.

HER ATTITUDE SAME

She has precisely the same attitude toward me. Often, when she does something for me, I say to her:

"Why, you didn't have to do that. I could have done it myself."

Her invariable reply is something like this:

"Of course, dear, I didn't have to do it. But I wanted to do it. If I thought I had to, I wouldn't have wanted to."

For that matter, so are men perverse creatures. There are few men of real spirit who like to be forced into doing anything. They immediately become stubborn. Every man and every woman likes to feel that they have some choice—that they are free agents. Every wife and every husband desires their actions toward each other to be dictated by their mutual emotions, rather than by compulsion.

When a husband finds himself doing something for his wife because he thinks he should, rather than because he really wants to do it, then he can know that the sharp edge of his love is beginning to dull. The same is true of the wife.

I fear that the failure to understand this phase of human psychology often results in unhappiness.

Of course, I believe husbands and wives have certain duties toward each other; certain things they should do for each other; but under ideal circumstances such duties are held as privileges rather than burdensome obligations to be performed under mental protest.

Marriage requires mutual readjustments, and these readjustments may seem to require mutual sacrifices; but when true love is present one does not think of them as sacrifices. If one thinks of them at all, one considers them as investments which bring large returns in happiness.

Fortunately, Fay and I are so much alike in tastes and ideas and reactions, that we found no major readjustments necessary. But human beings are not static. Their ideas change; their hearts change; their emotions shift. Every husband, every wife, must be always on the alert to hold love.

(Tomorrow: Rudy Vallee discusses marital vacations as a device to keep romance alive during marriage, and he shows that even in this "hard-boiled" age sentiment has an important place in married life.)

Fertilizer Interests Protest Rate Boost

Washington, Aug. 12 (AP)—Fertilizer producers and shippers told the Interstate Commerce Commission today that a 15 per cent increase in freight rates would add $5,700,000 to the annual cost of transporting their products to American farms.

The fertilizer interests protested the proposed increase. They held further the increases cause diversion of traffic to water routes and trucks.

A. D. Whittemore, of the American Cyanamid Company, said his company was able to sell fertilizer cheaper to the farmer in Japan than to the farmer in Ohio because of the difference in transportation costs.

Ex-Governor's Son Suicide

San Antonio, Tex., Aug. 12 (AP)—C. J. Haskell, 35, son of Oklahoma's first governor, C. N. Haskell, shot and killed himself in a hotel today. He had complained of business reverses.

They Shoot to Kill
Our State Police

A young bandit, 21 years old, wounded a State policeman in Sudbury. He was chased 50 miles in a wild flight to Leicester and there surrounded and shot to death by a cordon of State policemen.

A newspaper account said:

> "Patrolmen from a dozen State police barracks tumbled from their bunks and armed themselves when they received word that one of their number had been shot.
>
> "Most of them thought Doring had been killed and they started chase for the supposed killer, determined to capture him at all costs."

The esprit de corps of this State organization has some resemblance of an ancient Spartan Army.

Outlaws of the past, possessing more real courage, certainly more craft, than the present crop, hesitated to incur the personal wrath of the police.

Death by retaliation was their inevitable doom, and they knew it.

Individual deaths among the banditti who prey upon society are important, our penal and sociological experts tell us, to the extent that they throw fear into the underworld.

Modern lawlessness amounts to civil war. It must be fought with war.

What Is "Home"?

A Boston clergyman said in his Sunday sermon:

> "Homes in Greater Boston have become parking spaces for the night and filling stations for meals at breakfast and dinner."

As the cautious politician said, when pointed out the shorn lamb in the field, "Well, I'll admit it's sheared on this side, anyway."

Depends upon which side you look at it, and whether your congregation happens to be among the idle, indolent rich or an average, moral neighborhood.

Home-owning was never so vast and widespread as in this country today. Your banker knows, in times like this, the desperate struggle husbands and wives have been making to keep those homes away from the process servers. Men and women don't fight to maintain places they despise, that are only four walls serving as parking spaces and filling stations.

If this clergyman wants to see the other side of the lamb he ought to get into his car some Sunday and find the highways, groves, tourist camps and beaches alive with happy families on their week-end excursions together. Home is where the family congregates together in harmony and happiness.

'Interesting' Services
Answer to Church Problem

Roger W. Babson, speaking this time as Chairman of the Commission on Church Attendance of the Congregational Church, offers three ideas to increase dwindling church attendance.

His first idea is that the ministers should illustrate their sermons and use language that the AVERAGE man can understand and enjoy. The other ideas would be unnecessary.

People go to the golf course, the ball park or the motion pictures because something there will interest them; something they can see and understand without consulting a monograph on the subject. Christ used simple language understandable to all and frequently employed interesting parables to illustrate lessons. Had there been photographs in those days, He would have used them.

"Man-Made Fur"

George Goodall, at Sanford Mills, fifty years ago, invented the power weaving machine for mohair. The fabric had been made by hand since King Solomon's time.

Now, "man-made fur" is to come from the same place. Shorn mohair fleece is to be woven into a "fur" resembling coonskin. The trade-name, "Koongora," combines the coon with the fact that the fleece comes from the Angora goat.

Humanists—being those people who voted for the anti-steel trap law—are likely to say it is a humane invention, that will conserve fur-bearing animals.

Most people, however, will credit it for what it is, another evidence of Yankee textile ingenuity.

Come to New England

New England means so much to so many people.

A professor of Columbia University, speaking at one of our Summer camps, quoted his own feelings in the language of Oliver LaFarge, the author, who said:

> "When I get away from New England too long, I feel like a shrub pulled up by the roots and left in the air."

Climate, history, scenery and the atmosphere of sturdiness and dependability!

Let each of us form ourselves a committee of one to induce others to come here at this season and enjoy it as we do.

Bullets Less Dangerous

In the Boer War a wagonload of bullets was required to kill one English soldier. And the Boers were excellent marksmen.

In Massachusetts, the auto drivers have a higher record.

We shall all have to take to the jungle or hide behind trees if the slaughter keeps up.

We are supposed to be at peace, when no decent citizen has any excuse for slaying his fellowman.

Oom Paul Krueger, the Boer chieftain, if he came back, would believe we were in the midst of a civil war.

Listen, World!
By Elsie Robinson

Do Dead Men Live?

I DON'T WANT to die. Neither do you.

Always there's that secret horror and sorrow about death. What's the use of living, what's the use of loving, if it ends like that?

Elsie Robinson

You and I don't want to die. Why? Because we're afraid we'll STOP if we die. We're afraid we'll stop when the body stops.

We believe in the body. We can touch, see, hear, smell, or taste. We believe in matter—terribly. We hang on to matter frantically, as a child hangs on to its mother's hand in the dark. The child does not know what it would do if the hand let go. We do not know what we would do if matter let go.

Religion, to console us, tells us men do live after death. Live in Heaven—maybe as angels. So we get religion. And sing hymns about eternal life. But secretly we don't mean a word of it. We aren't consoled. We don't want to be angels in Heaven. We want to go right on living—regular. Making mistakes and taking risks . . . working, playing, laughing, loving. But how can we without bodies? We cannot conceive of life without bodies . . . of life having desire and delight, purpose and power without matter.

But this is nonsense, says Sir Oliver Lodge. For modern man deals constantly with "power without matter." Consequently we work with forces which we cannot feel, see, hear, taste or touch . . . with very lively ghosts who do all the important things, and simply use matter as a handy tool.

Sir Oliver Lodge ought to know. He is a great scientist. He deals in matter and in the forces which operate through matter, in light, heat, sound, magnetism, electicity, gravity. He knows as much about matter as any living man. He knows so much that he isn't fooled by it as the rest of us are.

"MATTER NEVER DOES ANYTHING," says Sir Oliver Lodge. "IT IS ONLY THE SIGN OR INDEX OF SOMETHING THAT IS OCCURRING IN SPACE. BUT TO FIND OUT WHAT IS OCCURRING WE HAVE TO OBSERVE MATTER."

We have to observe matter because our "receiving stations"—our senses—are not delicate enough to register the working of force unless it reacts through matter . . . EVEN IF WE COULD NOT WATCH ITS REACTION ON MATTER

You can prove that for yourself. Turn on your radio. Into the room pours a great, gay song. But the song does not come from the radio. It comes from a happy singer in Montreal. The song is a part of that singer . . . part of his living energy . . . part of the wave length we call his personality. A traveling part. And that part was traveling through your room before you turned on your radio. Your room is always filled with the songs and sobs, the laughter and gossip and fighting talk of men and women. No man would have believed this one hundred years ago. And you believe it only because you can catch it with a radio . . . because you can prove it through matter. But it would be there if there were no matter—

THEN WHY SHOULD NOT MAN? A man, too, is force, operating through matter. A man's body does not create thought and love any more than the wire creates electricity or the needle creates magnetism. A man's body is only a conductor. Electricity does not perish when the wire is broken. WHY SHOULD THE SPIRIT OF MAN PERISH WHEN THE BODY IS BROKEN? Electricity goes right on when the wire breaks. It does not hesitate. It "lives" just as it "lived" before. It does not have a "life before death" and a "life after death." Electricity has no death. Like all forces, it goes right on. THEN WHY SHOULD NOT MAN?

"He does!" says Sir Oliver Lodge. And we could soon prove it if we had the courage to study life and challenge death as we've studied and challenged the other barriers and superstitions which held us bound.

Once there were barriers all around human life. Man thought the earth was flat and dared not venture to its rim. Thought the plague was decreed by God—dared not question that decree. Thought time and space were immutable. It was sacrilege to doubt. But someone dared. What happened? Did God get mad? Anything but! Down curved the horizons to new and lovelier lands. Away scuttled the plague in the filthy hide of a rat. And, eventually, in one, throbbing, triumphant roar, Post and Gatty circled the globe in nine days . . . time and space crumbling behind them like the tail of a comet.

Once there were barriers all around. Now there is only one which still we dare not challenge—a six-foot hole.

"ASK AND IT SHALL BE GIVEN YOU . . . SEEK AND YE SHALL FIND—"

Then why not ask for life?

Why stop seeking at a grave?

In London

Traditions

LONDON, Aug. 12—One is rarely able to escape the haughtiness that is distinctly London as a first impression. Yet in a few days it mellows—melts away like one of its wraith-like fogs. Most Anglo-Saxons feel the tug of London no matter where they go. I think it is because of its pronounced pride.

No city in the world has rolled up such tradition. Every nook, every cranny, every mew is stuffed with some ancient memory that has played a part in history. In no other place has civilization lumped such a queer massing of humanity. Like it or not it is a phenomenon one must admire.

Paris has a gloating purr and London a harsh jangle. In Paris one is attracted by the portentious triviality. In London only the sober and gigantic reality. To me it is a city where the sun, like the people seeking happiness, is always trying with futility to shine.

If one judged England by its countryside from a train window all looks well. The wheat, the barley and oats are in healthy luxuriance. Yellow-hammers sing wildly on bordering hedge rows. Wild roses and bramble blossoms with touches of poppy scarlet bloom everywhere.

Yet upon thundering into Victoria Station and entering the city there is a thought that Great Britain is world weary—a bit sick. It may have been imagination but there was an impression of lassitude. I hurried to the cheerful artificial light of an hotel room.

A fugitive morning fog drifted low, stamping its eternal signet of the sea and making street and window illuminations pale yellow furry blobs. Pedestrians along paves seemed swimming figures snipped out of black paper. The buildings luminously gray in clear light were today vague smudges.

Despite these depressing surface misgivings there is a feeling of security about London. She appears a great ship plunging through the tempest with majestic indifference. And no matter the course there is a conviction she is bound to reach port safely.

The gayest hour of London is the lunch time between one and two. Everybody pours out of offices, shops and counting rooms in a seesaw of exuberance. Young men in trousers ruled like ledgers, stenographers arm in arm, young toffs in silk hats and gray derbies, Bill Sykeses, Arriets and Alfs scurry to quick lunch bars and coffee stalls. Countless omnibuses sway with passengers. Groups collect on the curbs and bridge ends. The streets fill with criers of racing tip sheets. Faces so tense and questioning relax and London forgets its worries for an hour.

This jaunt has been productive of one contact I always desired but somehow missed in New York. It was an introduction and pleasant evening with Harold MacGrath, the American novelist. He comes of the same literary era that produced Ade, Nicholson, Tarkington and McCutcheon and is now putting the finishing touches on his 39th book, which with more than 1500 short stories comprises a remarkable writing output. Our mutual love for dogs established an immediate and I hope lasting friendship. Who does not remember his "The Man on the Box", and "The Drums of Jeopardy?"

And that reminds me that perhaps all this "glooming" over London is because I had to leave my dog in France on account of the six months' quarantine rule on this side of the channel. He is billeted at a French chateau with many wide acres for playground. He was too frantically excited over a squirrel on a limb—the first he had ever seen—to pay the slightest attention to our farewell pat. It is not likely he will miss us as we miss him.

New Ideas Boost Trade

NEW IDEAS FOR PRODUCTS which meet new wants will help to bring a return of prosperity.

For twenty years, the motorization of America, as the automobile industry grew from infancy to manhood, enormously stimulated national well being.

After the depression of 1921, the development of the radio and other new devices likewise created a new background for wealth and prosperity.

What new secrets can be shaken from the bushes of hidden knowledge in order to stimulate business?

Many have asked the question, and thousands of practical scientists, working in the great laboratories of the country, are seeking to find the answer in the test tubes of industry.

In giving a hopeful view, Raymond Willoughby, in the Nation's Business, concludes:

> "Men's minds always work faster in depressions. It is true that no customer-making force such as the automobile or the radio is visible at the moment, but hundreds of new things are planned. Perhaps the cumulative effect of a thousand innovations will be equal to that of a single thing like the auto or radio."

The current business situation spells opportunity for the person of inventive mind.

The manager of a great retail business, in giving the specifications for success under present disturbed conditions, penetratingly pointed out:

> "To sell today, an article must have two points. It must be cheaper than it has been in recent years and it must have some point of newness so that the buyer feels justified in discarding the old. We have sold more men's bathing suits this year than ever before because our price was lower than it had ever been and we had a new style suit. We couldn't have sold such quantities of the old pattern at the lower price or the new pattern at the old price. But the two together were good."

While others complain of hard times, resourceful executives of more than 100 trend-bucking American corporations actually reported larger profits in the first half of 1931 than in the corresponding period of 1930.

BUSINESS RECOVERY MUST BE FOUGHT FOR, AND PLANNED. WISHING IS NOT ENOUGH.

THE NEW PROSPERITY MUST BE COMPOUNDED OF NEW IDEAS, FRESH COURAGE, AND UNREMITTING ENERGY.

We're Losing Our Titles

The French capture the tennis championships.

In wrestling, take your choice between DeGlane, a Frenchman, and Londos, a Greek.

A German wears the heavyweight prize-fighting crown; the lesser weights sound like a call of the family of Nations, Americans excluded.

A native-born Scot, American by adoption, won the British golf open.

Nurmi, a Finn, holds most of the distance running records.

Athletics that require skill, strength and durability find foreigners at the top.

Our vanity and egotism were due for a bump.

Prosperity, our self-sufficiency told us, was here forever. We were so strong nothing could happen to us.

Out of all these things, principally depression, we ought to learn that it is time to go to work, to fight harder.

Unless we do that, the only prize we deserve is the booby prize.

Just Folks

In Praise of Barbers Lytle and Lee

At Harbor Beach, upon the thumb
  Of Michigan, the U. S. A.,
To which in summer people come
  To spend the time in rest and play,
The passer-by who looks may see
  A barber's window with this title:
"Shave and Hair Cut. Lytle and Lee!"
  Or possibly 'tis "Lee and Lytle."

What matters how the sign appears!
  It is this partnership I sing.
There, side by side, for forty years
  They've shared the woes of barbering.
For forty years, day after day,
  They've worked on whiskers tough and matted
Given chins the violet scented spray,
  And later peaceably have chatted.

For forty years they've snipped and snipped,
  And watched their little fortunes mount;
How many bales of hair they've clipped,
  Baffles the human mind to count.
Fancy that constant rasping sound
  Of razor cutting human stubble,
And then receive this news profound:
  In all that time they've had no trouble!

Imagine this: For forty years,
  However was their patience tried,
Still, like the twin blades of their shears,
  They've worked together side by side.
Picture the hours alone they've spent,
  Waiting another chin to smother,
Without one word of argument
  To set 'em hating one another.

Oh, world, where countries quarrel so,
  And war in secret oft is planned,
Where armies wait the word to go,
  An object lesson is at hand.
If Lee and Lytle in their shop
  For forty years as friends can labor,
Surely great nations ought to stop
  Their foolish hatred of a neighbor!
